ELECTION '94: What will Tuesday bring?

Bill Monning

■ Each race in its own way is about change.

By PAUL WOLF

ELECTIONS COME and go, but one thing is certain: With each new round, there are newcomers promising change. Candidate Bill Clinton used that word as a rallying cry. Now there are candidates who declare that change means a movement away from the presidential platform and leadership.

In scores of regional races, there are those who say change means correcting the defects in the political process, as in the case of campaign finance reform and term limits. In special district battles, the change-versus-status quo takes different, frequently subtle forms.

Here is a wrapup of the major races voters will be considering Tuesday, and how new forces are hoping to win over the electorate:

■ Anchundo: 'Modest' turnout a likelihood.

By SCOTT BREARTON

MONTEREY COUNTY Registrar of Voters Tony Anchundo is predicting a modest turnout for Tuesday's election, based on recent showings.

"I'd be surprised if we see 55 percent this year," Anchundo said.

While there is no sure-fire method of predicting how many people will show up at the polls, election department officials can make an educated estimate based on comparable elections, according to Anchundo.

In the 1990 gubernatorial election, Anchundo said 59.7 percent of registered Monterey County voters went to the polls. That figure is substantially higher than the record low 36 percent who cast their votes in the June 1994 primary election.

"Looking at what occurred in the primary back in June, and with the overall feeling I see throughout the state, I just don't see a big turnout," Anchundo pre-

■ Assembly shootout a million-dollar affair.

By PAUL WOLF

THE REPUBLICANS are outspending the Democrats in the two regional legislative contests, and incumbent Bruce McPherson is paving the way for the 27th Assembly District battle to become a million-dollar affair.

So far, he has raised roughly twice as much money as Democratic challenger Bill Monning, a Salinas attorney.

Through the disclosure period ending Oct. 22, McPherson has raised $621,377; Monning has raised $322,529, according to the Monterey County Elections Department.

The two candidates together should easily surpass the $1 million dollar mark for contributions collected from the start of the Democratic and Republican primaries earlier this year through election day, Nov. 8.

Powerful statement

Undoubtedly, albeit unofficially, the No. 1-selling costume for Halloween 1994 had to be that of the Power Rangers. At Monday's parade at Carmel's Junipero Serra School, that point was dramatically driven home.

White working to establish visitors center at Fort Ord

By SCOTT BREARTON

IN AN effort to boost occupancy at area hotels, motels and inns, Carmel Mayor Ken White is working with other city officials to establish a Monterey Peninsula visitors center on Fort Ord land west of Highway 1.

As White explained, there is a shortage of overnight visitors in Carmel, a trend that he says can be changed by making information more readily available to them.

"We've been concerned that an increasing number of visitors coming to town are day-trippers," White said. "We don't have a problem with that. That's fine. But I say, 'Stay in Carmel, eat in Carmel, shop in Carmel.'"

Toward that end, about one and one-half years ago, White contacted Monterey Mayor Dan Albert, Pacific Grove Mayor Jeanne Byrne, and Mark Verbonich, vice president of community affairs for the Pebble Beach Co. White said the goal for their meetings - which took place over a six-month period - was to develop a

'Nurse of the Year' says she's blessed with a gift

■ CHOMP's Chciuk will be honored by national organization.

By SUSAN BECK

ANYTIME THERE'S a difficult situation involving a baby, Carol Jungwirth will say, "Get Zofia."

Zofia Chciuk has worked for Jungwirth since 1987 at the Intermediate Intensive Care Nursery (IICN) at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

"Zofia is an asset to our hospital, community and profession," said Jungwirth, IICN's manager.

Chciuk's performance in nursing and health care issues will be recognized Friday at Community Hospital when she receives the 1994 "Nurse of the Year" award from the National Certification Corp., which certifies specialists in neonatal nursing.

"I'm very honored Carol nominated me," said 43-year-old Zofia, the daughter of Polish immigrants. "And that she has that much respect for me."

Since Chciuk (pronounced Chook) started working at Community Hospital 12 years ago, she has been instrumental in developing several child care programs.

Frustrated at seeing babies in automobiles without car seats, Chciuk took action by working with a local agency to provide a car seat loan program through the hospital.

Zofia Chciuk can't imagine working anywhere else but in a nursery.

Chciuk also initiated a breast-feeding program for working mothers and helped to establish the hospital's Lactation Education Program.

Most recently, Chciuk got involved in a bioethics committee to address some difficult questions arising in nursing today.

"Nursing has changed a lot since I started," observed Chciuk, a 1974 graduate of Tacoma General Hospital School of Nursing at Fannie C. Paddock Memorial in Tacoma, Wash.

Chciuk had little doubt she would become a nurse. As a little girl she was always fixing bird's wings and bandaging dogs.

But it was the Maryknoll nun who spoke at Chciuk's grade school about being a nurse in the Andes who made the biggest impression on Chciuk's life.

"Everybody wanted to be a nun," she remembers. "But to be a nurse..."

At first, Chciuk thought she wanted to be an orthopedic nurse. That changed, however, when she started her obstetric gynecological training.

"Once I walked into a nursery, I never walked out," said Chciuk, who worked at San Francisco Children's Hospital — now the California Pacific Medical Center — before moving to the Monterey Peninsula in 1982.

"I can't imagine doing anything else," she added. "I'm very lucky. I have a job I love. I'm not saying I go to work everyday with wings on my feet, but I do feel that I've been blessed with a gift."

Although the "nitty-gritty" gets done by the nurses, Chciuk said. "Pediatrics is a team effort. We are all here for the child."

In 1990, Community Hospital also named Chciuk "Nurse of the Year," which was a tribute to her influence on nursing and the community.

Over the years, some very significant changes have occurred in the way the medical profession relates to infant care, Chciuk noted.

"In the past, nurses rarely touched newborn babies," she said. "Now, we try to provide more touching. And we encourage parents to do the same. We call it kangaroo care. New babies experience the feel of skin-to-skin as a sense."

Another step forward, Chciuk added, is that more men are involved with the birthing process and infant care.

"They want to be," she said. "Doctors and nurses aren't as cautious about having parents around. We need to let families be as involved as they want to be. We encourage families to realize that new babies are the center of the family, not separate from the family."

The most rewarding aspect of Chciuk's work is the realization that she has helped a family understand the uniqueness of their baby.

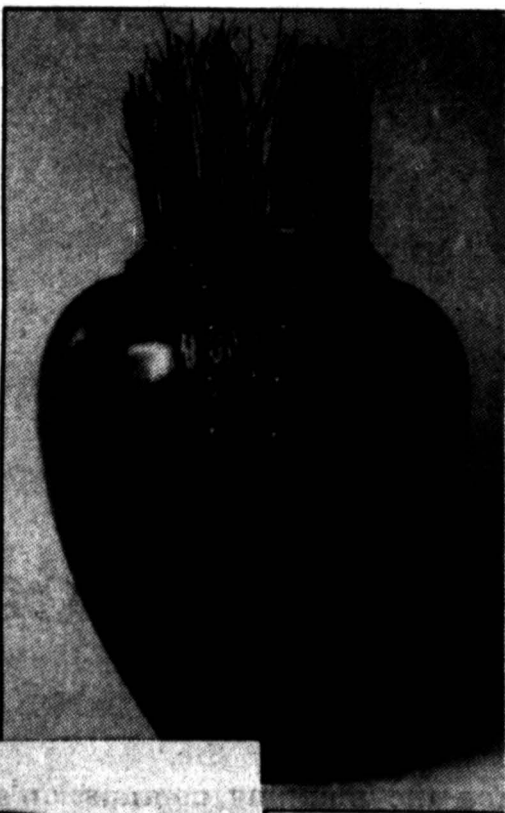

"Babies have their own personalities from the get-go," Chciuk observed. "They never existed before and will never exist again."

Asked about the best way to handle infants, Chciuk responded without hesitation: "Just love them for their uniqueness, not for what you want them to be."

Former supervisor, ex-mayor vie for Shipnuck's seat

By SUSAN BECK

ALTHOUGH THE section of Carmel Valley within Monterey County's 2nd District is relatively small, the decision for voters to elect either Russ Jeffries or Judy Pennycook as the district's supervisor isn't diminished in importance.

Jeffries and Pennycook are vying for the seat being vacated by Monterey County Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck, who has decided not to seek reelection after 16 years of service on the board.

If elected to the board next week, both candidates pledged to place Carmel Valley residents in District 2 back into the Fifth District with the majority of valley voters.

Both candidates boast equally long lists of endorsements, including supervisors Shipnuck and Sam Karas and the California Coastal Commission for Jeffries; Monterey County Peace Officers Association, Monterey County Hospitality Association and Carmel Valley Firefighters Association for Pennycook.

Russ Jeffries

The lion's share of campaign contributions went to Pennycook, 41, at $118,305 with her expenditures reaching $97,505 as of Monday.

Jeffries brought in $45,608 and has spent $33,638 as of the most recent campaign filing period.

Political experience

Before serving as mayor of Salinas for four years, Jeffries, a 59-year-old native of Carmel, was a Salinas councilman for six years. The longtime Salinas resident also served on the Salinas Valley Water Advisory Commission and was director of the Monterey County Water Resources Agency.

Currently a board member of the California Regional Water Quality Control Board and the Highway 101 Bypass Committee, Jeffries attributes his understanding of the two most important issues facing Carmel Valley residents — water and traffic — to his experience with these agencies.

New dam

As for the proposed new Los Padres Dam east of Carmel Valley Village, Jeffries doesn't believe a new dam will solve Monterey Peninsula's water shortage.

After 16 years as a supervisor for Monterey County, Barbara Shipnuck looks forward to her future.

SHIFTING OF GEARS

Barbara Shipnuck, Monterey County's first woman supervisor, looks to future

By SUSAN BECK

WHEN BARBARA Shipnuck steps down next year from her seat on the county's board of supervisors, she moves closer to fulfilling her longtime goal: to give county government a stronger voice in restructuring and financing the country's health care system.

After 16 years, the first woman ever to be elected to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors has decided to shift gears from political policy to public policy relating to health and human services.

"I want to concentrate my energies in a finite field of public policy rather than work on as many issues as I think you need to as a supervisor," Shipnuck said Monday at her Salinas Courthouse office.

Although Shipnuck — who has served District 2 for the past year and a half — had an offer last year to work as executive director of national commission in Washington, she decided not to accept while still in office.

"It didn't feel right for me," she said. "I still haven't made any final decision."

When Shipnuck leaves her office for the last time on Jan. 2, 1995, she will be missed, according to Susan West, her aide since 1981.

"She's wonderful and extremely knowledgeable," West said. "She takes in everyone's concerns and brings it all together. She's very good at developing a plan that will work."

Service-minded

One has only to observe the myriad of posters, photographs and plaques that adorn Shipnuck's office walls to know what she cares about: women's history and politics, older Americans and healthy babies, child abuse and teenage pregnancy, and AIDS.

In 1989, Shipnuck received a commendation from the California State Social Services Advisory Board for outstanding advocacy on behalf of children. The next year, she was named "Public Official of the Year" by the California Aging Network and, in 1993, was honored as "County Leader of the Year" by American City and County magazine.

In addition, the native of Brooklyn, N.Y., was selected to be one of seven people in local government across the nation to be profiled in Leadership magazine.

"I think government should work to assist people that can't assist themselves," Shipnuck said. "We must be user-friendly."

Public's interest

This belief was the impetus that spurred Shipnuck into public office in the late 1970s. As president of the League of Women Voters in Salinas, she helped develop a study on local health care.

At the same time, the board of supervisors was threatening to close the county hospital due to operating costs. One of the supervisors also served as a county hospital administrator.

"He did not, in my judgment, vote in the best interest of the public," recalled the Harvard graduate.

In 1978, with help from her family and several hundred volunteers, Shipnuck set in motion a grassroots campaign and won every precinct.

Council upholds decision to deny laundromat use permit

Water allocation woes wash out Kings' bid for new location.

By SUSAN BECK

JOHN AND Eileen King's final plea to establish a new laundromat in downtown Carmel was turned down Tuesday evening by the Carmel City Council.

Although several local residents spoke in favor of adding a resident-serving business to the community, Carmel Assistant Planner Rick Tooker told the council his staff had "exhausted every option" to find a way to help the Kings, whose big hurdle has been water.

Council members voted unanimously to uphold the Carmel Planning Commission's August decision to deny the Kings a use permit to open a laundromat on the corner of Dolores Street at Eighth.

The couple owned and operated Carmel Coin Wash on Junipero Avenue for 18 years, but lost their lease when the Horizon Inn decided to open its own laundry at the Junipero site.

'Carmel definitely needs another coin wash. The good people of Carmel came into Carmel Coin Wash and felt at home.'

— Eileen King

During the planning commission's review of the Kings' application, it became clear the city did not have enough water to operate a second laundromat.

In addition, the board of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District earlier this month turned down a request from the Kings to make a special allowance from the district's "community benefit" reserve.

Tooker's report said most of the commercial water had already been allocated to projects approved by the planning commission during the past eight months.

"Carmel definitely needs another coin wash," Eileen King told the council.

"The good people of Carmel came into Carmel Coin Wash and felt at home. It's your decision if we can serve you for another 18 years."

Councilman Bob Fischer said allocating water to the Kings would require taking it away from someone else. "I can't see doing that," he added.

Tooker noted giving the Kings water for a laundromat would severely reduce the city's remaining water supply. "It would place the community in a water moratorium within a few months," he said.

Mayor Ken White told the Kings, "If the option was just to put another laundromat in Carmel, I'd say yes. But that isn't the case. None of us feel good about this."

cooperative relationship among neighboring peninsula cities.

One of the ideas to emerge was the creation of a joint visitors center on Fort Ord land west of Highway 1, so that before visitors even reach the Monterey Peninsula, they will know precisely what each community has to offer them in the way of food, lodging and entertainment.

White said the City of Carmel wrote a letter to Del Rey Oaks Mayor Jack Barlich, also chairman of the Fort Ord Reuse Authority (FORA), asking him to write the state parks department. According to White, FORA is asking the state to expand its proposed visitors center on the west side of Highway 1 when that land is converted to a state park.

"We want it to be expanded so the peninsula cities and Monterey County can have information in that visitors center," he said.

FORA coordinator Joseph Cavanaugh told the Carmel Pine Cone Tuesday that a letter was authorized at its Oct. 27 meeting. Directed to Mary Wright, regional director of the California Department of Parks and Recreation, it formally requests that a visitors center be included in the State Park Master Plan.

"No specific location is being recommended at this time, although the members have emphasized that the visitor center needs good vehicular access and visibility, especially for southbound traffic on Highway 1," Barlich wrote.

Cavanaugh said the land will be turned over to the state "sometime next year or early 1996."

"I think (state parks) will respond favorably," he forecasted.

White predicted the center could help reduce traffic — something all peninsula city officials would welcome. "We want to catch them before they get into town, get them information, let them make their arrangements and drive straight to where they want to go."

If state parks refuses, White said, the peninsula coalition will ask FORA for its own parcel of Fort Ord land on the west side of Highway 1 to use to build a visitors center, rest stop and parking lot.

Rick Lawrance, executive vice president of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and Visitors & Convention Bureau, agreed the joint visitors center would benefit the entire area.

"We will certainly be supportive of an effort to put a visitor center at Fort Ord," said Lawrance. "People driving in are looking for information immediately upon arrival — what to do, where to stay, where to eat. Those are realities of traveling."

A step in the right direction was an agreement recently reached between the cities of Carmel, PC, Monterey, Seaside and Marina to share the Monterey Visitors Center. Up until last month, the visitors center — located at 401 Camino El Estero — only contained information about the City of Monterey's amenities, according to White.

Although White says the Monterey Visitors Center is "hard to find and hard to get to," it does attract anywhere from 900 to 1,500 people every day, he noted.

Last September, the Carmel City

Council retreat to focus on finances, privatization

THE CARMEL City Council will tackle long-term financial goals and the possibility of putting certain city services under private contract at a retreat scheduled for Friday.

The council is scheduled to meet from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Chapman Room at Carmel's Sunset Center. Members of the public are encouraged to attend.

The morning session will include discussion of fiscal goals, including long-range projections, "new budget items" and possible "privatization of (certain) city functions," according to Carmel City Clerk Jeanne Brehmer.

"It will be general and broad, and we will look at different ways of doing things," said Carmel Mayor Ken White.

A professional moderator will guide the first portion of the retreat.

The second order of business will be to examine a number of in-house procedures, such as the appointment process for city commissions.

Finally, the council will consider a resolution to allow the Carmel Recreation Commission to hold fund-raising events to finance the Vista Lobos renovation project.

Big races, key issues aside, voter turnout expected to be modest

dicted. "There's a lot of apathy out there."

Anchundo said two controversial propositions on the ballot—184 ("Three Strikes, You're Out") and 186 (Single-Payer Health Care)—would stimulate voter interest, "but not to the degree that Ross Perot did back in 1992."

In the City of Pacific Grove, which has city council and mayoral seats up for grabs, Anchundo anticipates a higher voter turnout, perhaps as high as 70 percent. But the overall county average will be in the low 50s, he said.

One factor used to gauge voter turnout is the number of absentee ballots returned, according to Anchundo.

"I don't have a magic ball here," he said. "There's no scientific way of predicting it. You just kind of get a feeling, based on absentee returns."

With less than one week to go, Anchundo said the elections department has received fewer than one-third of the approximately 33,000 absentee ballots issued—about 10,000. He noted the deadline to return absentee ballots is 8 p.m. Tuesday at either the elections department or any polling place.

"Postmarks don't count," Anchundo said. "You'd be surprised how many ballots come in after the fact."

"It's a shame, because they've taken the time to vote."

As of Oct. 20—ninedays after the Oct. 11 voter registration deadline—there were 77,193 registered Democrats in Monterey County, compared to 52,783 registered Republicans.

But according to David Yamada, a political science professor at Monterey Peninsula College, registration numbers don't necessarily reflect voter turnout. He said a high voter turnout is generally more favorable for Democrats, and a low turnout more favorable for Republicans.

"The evidence of past voting behavior is that Republican voters turn out at the polls with more regularity," Yamada said. "In this county, that's been a fairly consistent pattern over the years."

Nevertheless, Yamada predicts a gradual "trending down" of voter turnout, despite the issues that may be on the ballot. He attributes the anticipated shift to a growing distaste toward mudslinging in political advertisements and the political process in general.

"What I see more than anything is cynicism, anger and discontent," Yamada observed. "Personally, it's troubling. I think it raises most serious questions about majoritarian principles in a democracy."

Yamada said he "wouldn't be surprised" if turnout at Tuesday's election is less than 50 percent.

The polls are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Assembly, congressional TV debates to air this weekend

TELEVISED DEBATES for assembly and congressional candidates have been scheduled for Saturday and Sunday.

Bill Monning and Bruce McPherson, candidates for the 27th Assembly District seat, will match views on KSBW, Channel 8, at 5 p.m. Saturday.

TV ad catapults Carmel's Klaas into middle of state race

Alternating between rage and reflective tones, Klaas took his stand in a hometown interview which followed yet another appearance — last Sunday — on national television.

He spoke in the Carmel home where the schoolgirl, purportedly murdered at age 12 by the habitual felon named Richard Allen Davis, spent many joyous holidays.

Asked if he thought the $50,000, 26-second TV spot opposing the re-election of California Attorney General Dan Lungren was the best way to honor the memory of Polly Klaas, Joe told The Carmel Pine Cone:

"I certainly do. Polly Power is at work here. If she were with us, she would call (the commercial) 'neat.' I think it's a miracle that I'm able to expose this outrageous violation of the public trust which obviously endangered the life of my granddaughter as well as all other potential victims in California."

Polly's remains eventually were cremated, and her ashes strewn atop Carmel Bay. Made for the campaign of Democratic attorney general candidate Tom Umberg, the TV spot shows Joe Klaas at the Sonoma County grave site where the child's body allegedly was jammed under old lumber and leaves by her killer.

On film, Joe leaves flowers at the grave. There are intercuts of him and Polly played against Davis being led into court. As Joe rises and departs, the camera zooms in tight on his T-shirt. The message there: Remember Polly. Dump Lungren.

The commercial says Lungren took money for a computerized criminal records system and put it into a public relations budget. Had the system been operative the night Polly was kidnapped from her Petaluma home, it contends, sheriff's deputies who encountered Davis would have known he was a convicted abductor and might have saved her life.

The spot began running in late October. Lungren, a Republican, immediately said the computerized system was lost as part of the general budget crunch — and that the Klaas commercial was "the single sleaziest campaign ad in the history of the state."

Veteran political columnists Phillip Matier and Andrew Ross of The San Francisco Chronicle reported the spot's price tag as "10 times the cost of your typical political ad." Richie Ross, campaign manager for State Assemblyman Umberg, was quoted by them as once having said: "When your candidate is nowhere, just pick a fight."

Umberg's campaign said the ad catalyzed $370,000 in contributions, and that $2 million might be spent on air time — right up until election day on Nov. 8. The Polly Klaas Foundation, which helps locate missing children, said the spot caused volunteers and major financial contributors to fall away.

'Disappointed'

Becky Hunter of Pebble Beach coordinated regional flyer distribution when searchers prayed and hoped that Polly was still alive.

"I have such love for Joe that I'd like to support his decision to do it," said Hunter of the ad. "But I was disappointed. It was a gut-wrencher. The whole scenario was not something I like to see, just to get someone elected. I have real mixed feelings. I felt a deep sadness."

Even seasoned news pros were shaken by the commercial. "It was tremendously powerful," said one local editor. "The first time I saw it, I felt like I'd been struck with thunder. I can imagine the reaction when they first showed it to a test group."

Sonoma County Sheriff Mark Ihde said the computer tracking system "would not have helped." He

CRA benefit raises $26,000 for public library foundation

THE CARMEL Residents Association's Oct. 21 fund raiser featuring cartoonist Charles Schulz raised more than $26,000 for the Carmel Public Library Foundation, according to Clayton Anderson, CRA member and event chairman.

"The present plan is for it to go into our endowment fund," said Dorothy Newton, president of the Carmel Public Library Foundation.

"We're working toward a $3 million goal," Newton noted. "This will go a long way toward that and we're delighted to have it."

Anderson said more than 300 people laughed and applauded as Schulz reminisced about 40 years of creating his Peanuts characters.

"Schulz clearly had the crowd in the palm of his hands," Anderson said. "A visibly-moved Mayor (Ken) White thanked him for his wonderful presentation and formally made Schulz an official, but non-taxpaying citizen of Carmel-by-the-Sea."

Carmel looks to get its fair share of area tourists

Council approved a $22,000 per year expenditure to share in the cost of operating the center, according to White. He said the figure is based on the number of commercial hospitality rooms within the city limits — about 1,000.

"Any business in Carmel can go in there now and put any information in the Monterey Visitors Center, because we're paying part of the operating cost of that center," White said.

The agreement is a good deal for the City of Carmel, according to White, since it has about the same amount of space at the visitors center, yet pays about one-third less than the City of Monterey, which has approximately three times as many rooms.

According to a Monterey-Carmel Visitor Survey taken last October, 52 percent of overnight visitors stayed in Monterey, compared to only 20 percent in Carmel and 10 percent in PG.

White said he wants to cut into Monterey's share of the hospitality market. He maintains Carmel's inns offer competitive rates.

"We can't meet the Fremont Street rates," he acknowledged, "but on the other hand, our inns are within walking distance of town...and we have the ambience."

It's time for a change!

I was born and raised in California and feel fortunate to live on the magnificent Big Sur Coast. In fact, my husband Kevin and I were married on Pfeiffer State Beach in Big Sur. After attending college, I began my own business and have been self employed since. I am currently associated with Fox and Carskadon as a realtor.

Our Regional Park District needs to clearly define its priorities. We, the voters and taxpayers, need to decide what agenda we want to pursue. I am keenly interested in ending "business as usual" and promoting broader public participation in the Park District's activities. I have always embraced challenge and have a strong commitment to the delicate BALANCE of environmental quality with individual rights. You can look to me for strict accountability and fiscal discipline.

The current Board operates without a published "General Plan", and has been known to ignore public input and oversight. Because resources are scarce we should focus our limited revenues according to a "General Plan." It should emphasize improving maintenance and security of existing parklands along with the preservation of open space consistent with the public's ability to pay for, use, and enjoy it. Unlike my opponent, who has already served 13 years on the Board, I acknowledge the will of the voters in this county (who favor term limits), and I pledge to serve no more than 2 four year terms.

I have a great love for our breathtaking Peninsula whose aesthetic beauty I will always fight to preserve. Your vote for me on November 8th will continue the tradition of environmental protection, while adding some desperately needed qualities into our Park District...BALANCE, FAIRNESS, & COST-EFFECTIVENESS. This campaign can be summed up quite simply...QUALITY OR QUANTITY...the choice is yours!

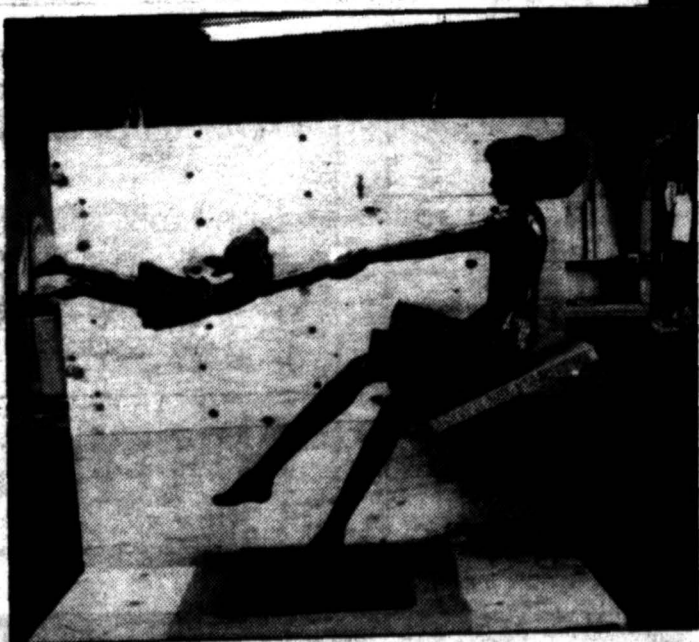

Thank You!

After 15 years, Michael Zambory will step down

Wastewater district GM proud of work on reclamation project

By SCOTT BREARTON

MICHAEL ZAMBORY is retiring from his position as general manager of the Carmel Area Wastewater District at year's end, he told The Carmel Pine Cone last week.

"I've been here 15 years," Zambory said. "It's time for someone else to come in and grab the reins. I've had fun here."

Zambory, a 68-year-old Pacific Grove resident, said his decision was made easier with the Pebble Beach Reclamation Project now on line. He has worked on the $33 million project for the last 10 years, and delayed his retirement until he saw the project to finally come to fruition on Sept. 21.

"I've had a great time with this reclamation project," he said. "We've been planning this for years. Now we're producing water and delivering it to seven golf courses."

The project - financed by the Pebble Beach Co. - is a cooperative venture between the water and sewage districts and the Pebble Beach Community Services District. Treated sewage from the Carmel Area Wastewater District is recycled for irrigating golf courses in the Del Monte Forest. It also is used as a peninsula-wide drought reserve.

After 15 years, Michael Zambory, general manager of the Carmel Area Wastewater Management District, is retiring Dec. 31. He said he looks forward to painting, golfing, playing piano and traveling in retirement.

Construction for the project included new facilities at the sewage plant (located at the mouth of Carmel Valley), new pumping and storage equipment and miles of pipeline.

Zambory noted the process for finding a new general manager is well underway. From 110 people who took out applications, 40 answered the required essay questions. From that pool of applicants, six were chosen for final interviews, which took place last Friday and Monday afternoons.

The Carmel Area Wastewater District Board of Directors next week will cast the final vote for a new general manager, who will assume the post on Jan. 1, 1995.

Maggie Hardy named new chair of planning commission

MAGGIE HARDY has been elected chairwoman of the Carmel Planning Commission. Carl Livingston will serve as vice chair.

The seven-member commission serves as an advisory board to the city council on issues such as land use and design review.

Hardy holds a master's degree in urban studies and planning from Occidental College and a bachelor's in political science and journalism from Whittier College.

Hardy is currently the director of development for The Big Sur Land Trust.

CRA raises $26,000 for library foundation

When it was all said and done, Anderson said $26,698 had been raised for the Carmel Public Library Foundation. He noted the total amount includes proceeds from ticket sales, Snoopy pin sales, a silent auction and a $4,000 donation from Carmel Plaza.

Because all proceeds were directed to the library foundation, all "up front" expenditures - such as printing, postage and supplies - were paid for by the CRA, according to Anderson. Carmel Plaza covered the cost of printing and mailing invitations for the event.

'Relay Challenge' set for Saturday

■ 400 participants to circle CHS track for 24 hours straight.

FORTY TEAMS of 10 are taking the "24-Hour Relay Challenge," pledging to circle the track at Carmel High School - one person at a time, one mile at a time - until they drop, according to organizers.

To goal is to keep going, "to survive any way you can," said Janet Myer, co-director of the event and chairwoman of Community Against Substance Abuse (CASA).

Myer said the "cross-generational community mobilizer" - slated for 10 a.m. Saturday to 10 a.m. Sunday - will include a silent auction, hot air balloon rides, campfires, games, jugglers, magicians, a health fair and food booths.

Additionally, the In-line Performance Team - featuring some of the area's hottest in-line skaters - will give a demonstration at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, and Jonah and the Whale Watchers, a local reggae band, will play from 5 to 7 p.m. Saturday.

So far, Myer said the long list of participants includes students, parents, teachers, administrators, city officials, business people and local firemen. Municipal Court Judge William Burleigh will serve as honorary chairman of the event.

Local service clubs will be getting into the act, too. Members from the Carmel Lions Club will serve dinner to 300 walkers on Saturday night, and members of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Kiwanis Club will prepare a pancake breakfast Sunday morning to participants and the public.

"The public is invited to attend Sunday morning for a fun pancake breakfast and to cheer on everyone who completes their 24-hour relay commitment," Myer said. "We want the town to come out and cheer these people on."

Myer said the fund raiser is expected to raise approximately $10,000 for Carmel Unified School District's peer counseling programs, Youth Community Services and CASA's drug-free programs. She said any money raised above the $400 team entry fee may be allocated to a non-profit organization of the team's choice.

"This will be one of the most outrageous events of the year, and it all promotes our youth to lead healthy lives," Myer said.

Event co-director and CHS counselor Lauren Cohen told The Carmel Pine Cone Monday that she and fellow organizers were surprised by the community's enthusiasm, particularly since this is only the first year of what they hope will become an annual event.

"It's all coming together," Cohen said. "It's been a lot of work, but we're thrilled with the overwhelming response - by the students and the community."

For additional information about how to participate in the 24-Hour Relay Challenge, call Myer at 648-4311, or Cohen at CHS, 624-1821.

Annual 'College Transfer Day' slated for Tuesday at MPC

MONTEREY PENINSULA College, in cooperation with Carmel High School, will present its 10th annual College Transfer Day and Night on Tuesday at the MPC College Center.

McC Campbell, in spite of no-PAC stance, outcollects Farr

The spending gap between McPherson and Monning can be accounted for in part — but not entirely — by Monning's refusal to accept political-action committee contributions.

Other spending disclosures reveal:

■ Congressional Challenger Bill McC Campbell's own no-PAC pledge has not kept him from outcollecting and outspending his opponent, Rep. Sam Farr, D-Carmel.

As of Oct. 19, McC Campbell has received $363,429, according to the Federal Elections Commission. Farr has taken in $308,733.

■ In the battle for Monterey County Superior Court's Office 3, Municipal Court Judge Michael Fields has raised $79,813 as of Oct. 22, and challenger Ann Hill, a Monterey County deputy district attorney, has collected $70,432.

■ In the contest for Ward 5 of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, incumbent Zed Leavy has raised $9,156 as of Oct. 22, compared to challenger Barbara Hulsey's $5,723.

SF Chronicle: Klaas TV spot 'went over the line...a cheap shot'

said his deputies were unaware a kidnapping had occurred when they detained and released Davis, who remains jailed and will stand trial on a variety of Polly-related charges. The ad was "outrageous," Ihde said.

On Sunday, Joe said The San Francisco Chronicle and other major newspapers would endorse Umberg "largely because of the ad." On Monday, The Chronicle did indeed come out for the Southern California lawmaker, but the ad was played in a much different light.

"...the Umberg campaign went over the line by running a TV ad that, in effect, blamed Lungren for the death of Polly Klaas. It was a cheap shot, unworthy of any politician. Unfortunately, the Klaas kidnapping has been exploited for political gain by many of the state's top politicians, including the attorney general."

No retreat

Joe Klaas did not back down during the interview on Sunday. Shortly before then, he'd returned from San Francisco and an appearance on the network TV show Good Morning America.

"You're damn right I'd do it again," he said passionately. "I called the Umberg people five weeks ago and offered my help. Why are people more concerned about 'good taste' than they are about Lungren taking apart that computer system?"

When the deputies stopped Davis, Joe claimed, "he was wild-eyed, had twigs in his hair and was trying to drink a beer. It's in the court records, and right there they would have had him on a parole violation. If they had that system, they would have known he was on parole for kidnapping."

Joe said the interview in the TV spot came right out of "nine major newspapers. I've spent hours on the phone with editors at those newspapers. They say the stories are accurate. I talked about this (computer system) again and again. And I'll repeat: Dan Lungren is possibly responsible for Polly's death."

Crime Tip

FROM THE CARMEL POLICE DEPARTMENT

An open door is an open invitation

AS MOST of you are aware, the Carmel Police Department strives to have an officer patrolling the business area on foot as often as possible. This includes the night shift. When you're home sleeping at night, it's comforting to know there's someone out there trying to protect what you've worked so hard to earn. After all, your business is everything to you. Even a minor loss can hurt, and a really substantial loss could put you out of business altogether.

This is why an alarm system is so important. Most burglars will pass you by if you have an alarm and its presence can be easily detected from the outside. As we've said before, we can count on one hand the number of businesses equipped with an alarm system that have been burglarized over the past 10 years. And most of those were hit because the burglars didn't realize that the system was in place. When the alarm went off, they fled immediately, leaving the owner's property intact.

It's a 'lock'

Although having an alarm system is truly good advice, this week's column is not about alarms. It's about locks. A lock on your door won't do any good if you don't use it.

Last week alone, we discovered no less than nine businesses left unsecured by their owners. Fortunately, in each instance, it was the police who found the oversight, not a burglar looking for a quick score.

The security of your business is as important to us as it is to you. That's why you'll find us out there every night, looking for potential trouble. Our job would be much easier if everyone would take a few minutes at closing to ensure that all doors and windows are locked and the alarm is set.

Yes, one business last week had not only been left unlocked, someone had also forgotten to set the alarm. If that were not enough, the store's receipts had been left inside where anyone could find them. No search required.

Cash out

If you own a business, please don't leave cash in your drawer overnight. If you don't have a safe, consider making deposits throughout the day. This way the amount of cash you'll have on hand will be reduced, and your potential loss will be minimized as well.

We highly recommend that you remove all cash from your business each night and leave your register open. It's not uncommon for a burglar to destroy your register trying to get inside, only to find it empty. Better to let him see that it's empty before he starts.

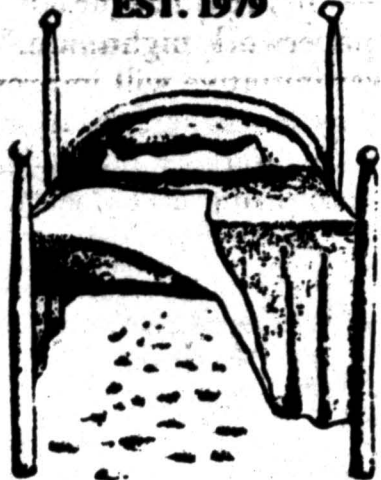

Consider preparing a list of procedures to be followed each evening as you're closing. This will ensure that your business is truly secure when you leave and significantly reduce the chances that a burglar will "visit" your business while you're sleeping.

You can bet we'll be out there all night protecting your interests, but as the old saying goes, "we can't be everywhere at once."

CRIME TIP is written by Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras of the Carmel Police Department, and the space is provided free as a community service message by The Carmel Pine Cone.

High cost of health care enough to make you sick

By SHIRLEY KOPLOY
'Prime Time' Columnist

I HAVE just paid out a whopping quarterly premium for my Medi-Cal (Medicare Supplemental) insurance and I want to scream. The premium just went up...again. I can't afford it. But I'm afraid not to have it.

Wondering where to turn, we look to the experts for guidance, but you and I are the real experts on how the current system impacts upon us. We're paying the bills, having the problems finding doctors who will take Medicare and Medi-Cal patients and trying to make ends meet on moderate, fixed or low incomes.

Even high-income older adults can get clobbered by insurance and medical bills. The stress of it all can make you sick if you aren't ill already.

What are your options?

For those who are looking for answers, there are a number of choices, not without their risks.

■ You can go on the way you are, having been told that the United States has the best health care system in the world (but one of only two industrialized nations without a universal health care plan). In many ways, the system is very good. It's also very expensive, and it doesn't work for everybody.

■ You can consider an HMO (Health Maintenance Organization). Secure Horizons, the first HMO to come into Monterey County, offers comprehensive health care services to its enrolled members for a low monthly premium, a low physician co-payment and benefits over and above those covered by standard Medicare, including annual physical and 100 percent hospital coverage.

Advocates of managed care state that the growth rate of health care costs could be slowed if the majority of the citizens enrolled in these plans. Critics say that the lower costs of HMOs is made possible due to the practice by doctors and hospitals of shifting costs to private patients. As the numbers of people in HMOs grow, at a certain point, they say, there will not be enough private patients to make up the difference.

HICAP forum

At a forum sponsored by the Health Insurance Counseling and Advocacy Program (HICAP) of Santa Clara County, speaker Aileen Harper, assistant director, Center for Health Care Rights, Los Angeles, made the following points:

— HMOs become more attractive to Medicare beneficiaries when they look at supplemental health insurance costs.

— In a managed care environment, such as an HMO, the primary care doctor essentially functions like the gatekeeper to specialists and must limit the use of more expensive services in order to contain costs.

— Those who are happiest (in a managed care system) "...are assertive and

We can bill you one of three ways: Medicare, AARP, or we can hold you for ransom.

— By Chuck Scardina know how to work the system."

— Once in a Medicare HMO, when you have trouble with access to care, you should ask for a written denial and file an appeal.

But before you switch from Medigap insurance to an HMO, be absolutely sure it is for you. It may not be easy to switch back again if you become dissatisfied.

■ Either by decision or default (you can't pay the premium), you can drop your Medigap insurance and pay your own co-payments. According to Brooks Lockhart, one of our knowledgeable local HICAP counselors, you'd be reimbursed for just what Medicare covers, which on an average is 60 to 70 percent of your doctors' bills.

The doctor, by law, must limit charges to 115 percent of the approved amount, a cap which was initiated approximately two years ago. This has greatly reduced some of the high charges of those specialists who had been billing in excess of the Medicare-approved amount, letting the patient take up the slack.

If the doctor "takes assignment," he or she agrees to take what Medicare approves, which is essentially reducing the rate by 10 to 15 percent. When you get up into the bigger numbers, however, say for a surgery, your co-payment can run into three or four figures. Even with Medigap insurance, your share can mount up.

Lockhart's observation is that, judging by his clients alone, the practice of doctors taking assignment for big surgical bills is more prevalent in the Palo Alto area and in Southern California than it is in Monterey County.

Drop your supplemental insurance, which fills in some of the gaps in Medicare, at your own risk.

■ If you are disabled or 65 or older, you may be eligible for Medi-Cal or share-of-costs Medi-Cal. Both your income and assets are taken into consideration.

Once enrolled, you don't have to pay the Medicare Part B premium. Many prescriptions are covered, as well as dental care and eyeglasses. As a share-of-costs client, you can use your Medi-Cal card at times when you have a big surge of medical bills that insurance isn't going to cover or if you have no insurance at all.

On the con side, you may have difficulty finding a doctor or a nursing home that will accept Medi-Cal patients. So far, in this county, finding a hospital is not a problem, although shockingly it is in some areas.

And on Tuesday's ballot...

■ You can consider the California Health Security Act, Proposition 186, the Single Payer Plan, come Tuesday. If passed, it will go into effect January 1, 1996.

Advocate Stephen Schear, representing the California Physicians Alliance, at a forum held by HICAP of Santa Clara County, asserted that almost half of the health care in this country is already delivered through a type of single-payer system.

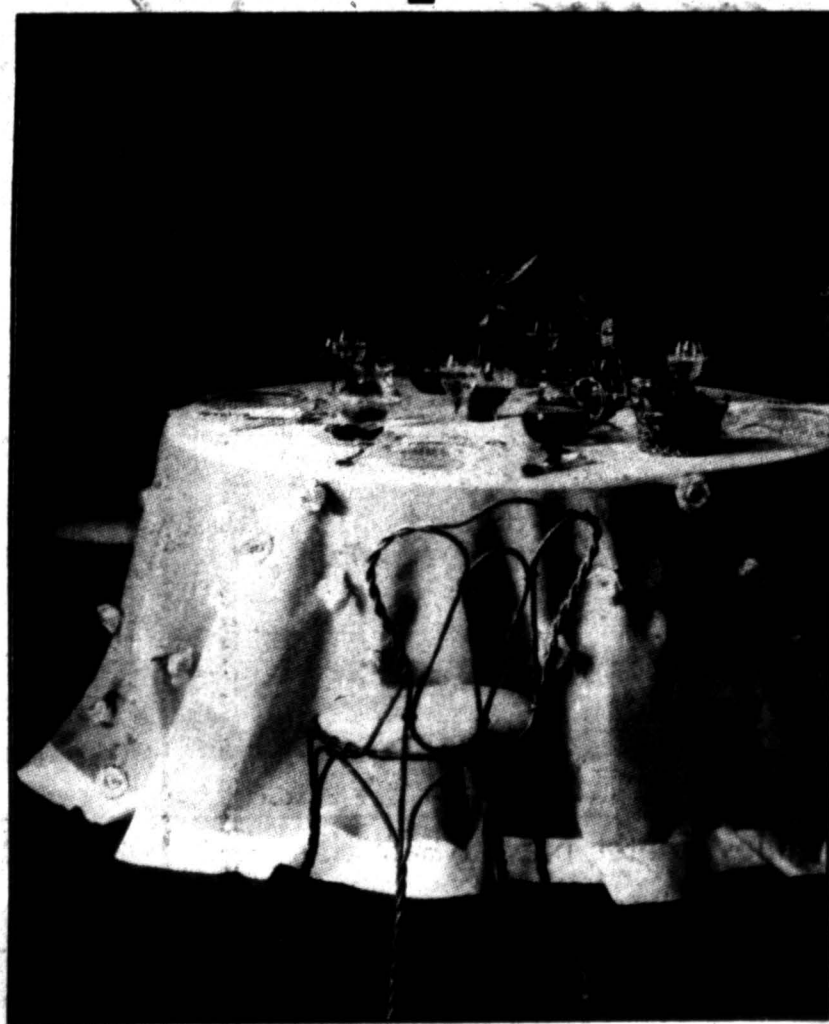

He said that we pay about 44 percent of our health care dollars through the government — Medicare, Medicaid and other plans in which the government pays providers. Thirty-two percent is paid to private insurance companies, which pay providers. The remaining 24 percent is paid directly out of pocket for co-payments and deductibles, and by people who don't have insurance.

Schear made some other key points:

— For providers the current system is a "paperwork nightmare." The single-payer initiative will improve the situation by taking out the numerous insurance companies managing our care, while offering a choice of private providers and HMOs. Prop 186 includes additional benefits, such as long-term care and prescription drug coverage, than does Medicare.

— The Canadian plan spends less than one percent on administration,

McCampbell makes new bid to unseat Farr; McPherson braces for Monning challenge

— the second against incumbent Sam Farr — will be a charm. Farr, the Democrat from Carmel, formerly a state assemblyman, was picked by voters in a special election last year to replace longtime representative Leon Panetta, who joined Clinton's cabinet.

McCampbell, a Pebble Beach attorney and small businessman, has been a voice of change by opposing the Democratic agenda of taxes and entitlements. Whether it is the invasion of Haiti or the president's health care plan, McCampbell levels charges at Clinton — which means Farr takes the heat by extension.

In its Oct. 20 issue, The Carmel Pine Cone's lead story asked, "Is Farr's seat in jeopardy?" McCampbell is banking on his race being more than a contest of regional concerns. If the spirit says, "Throw the bums out," McCampbell believes it should start here at home.

The challenger, for a third time, will not accept political action committee contributions as a display of his resisting the tainting influence of Washington. He also believes in term limits, which Farr does not.

Farr, meanwhile, hopes voters will remember the good that came out of the 103rd Congress — NAFTA, a crime bill and the first earnest stab at deficit reduction.

The race also includes Green Party candidate E. Craig Coffin.

■ 27th District, State Assembly: two-year term.

Salinas Attorney Bill Monning's reputation for being a warrior of change dates back to last year's special congressional race, in which he, too, made an anti-PAC pledge and finished second to Sam Farr in the Democratic primary.

He has continued that pledge in this year's assembly contest, and furthered himself as the candidate of "inclusion" by conducting a major voter-registration drive.

"The fewer people who vote here in the district, the more money that is being spent in Sacramento," he has said. Ironically, the incumbent, Bruce McPherson, also seeks to separate himself from "business-as-usual." He has worked doggedly to promote himself as an independent thinker, stressing his environmental val-

High health care costs enough to make you sick

Medicare spends only two to three percent, and California's Medi-Cal has administrative costs of only five percent. This compares with average administrative, sales and marketing costs, brokers' commissions and profit for U.S. private health insurance companies of 26 percent.

■ Funding of the single-payer program will come from money that we are already paying in taxes for Medicare and Medicaid, plus a 4.4 to 8.9 percent payroll tax on business, which is far lower than most businesses pay for health insurance, and a 2.5 percent income tax on adjusted gross income.

Opponents of the bill say that Prop. 186 will create a massive new government bureaucracy, will result in huge tax increases, loss of jobs, and the possibility of rationing and limited choices for health care.

I have referred in previous columns to the guru on the hill who told the seeker of truth, "I can tell you about the meaning of life, but please don't ask me to explain how Medicare works." Doubtless, he would say the same thing about health care plans.

As for me, I only know that I'm hurting and I'm sure many of you out there are feeling the pinch. It's time for us to consider the options. Proposition 186, the Single-Payer plan, on this coming Tuesday's ballot is one of them.

Sun shines brightly on Carmel's birthday bash

THE TYPICAL television Halloween specials with violent themes were replaced Sunday by clean sheets with holes for eyes, witches with tennis shoes, lipsticked draculas and several ballerinas with bunny ears.

The event: a community celebration of the City of Carmel's 78th birthday on the eve of Halloween, held on a splendid sun-splashed afternoon.

Wailing fire engines, antique cars and thousands of dressed-up ghosts and goblins paraded down Ocean Avenue dressed for the occasion.

The entourage ended up at the Sunset Center for ice cream and a chicken barbecue. There were costume awards, music by the Mariachi Mixtlan, raffle prizes and free birthday cake for all.

Highlighting the event was Mayor Ken White's presentation of the "Spirit of Carmel" award to Carmel High School senior Jessica Kattan for volunteering more than 500 hours of service to the community.

The Carmel Boy Scouts Troop Color Guard led the Halloween parade down Ocean Avenue Sunday during the city's 78th birthday celebration.

Photos, story by Chuck Scardina

Carmelites Sabrina Hare, Amber Brown, Jessica Hare, Jackie Hare, Megan Walter and Sara Soell (front) ready themselves for the Halloween parade.

Carmel Mayor Ken White and Councilwomen Paula Hazdovac and Barbara Livingston flank CHS senior Jessica Kattan, who received a plaque for volunteering more than 500 hours of community service. The presentation was made during Carmel-by-the-Sea's 78th birthday celebration.

Vampire Christopher Garcia, 9, spreads his wings at the parade starting point. He hails from San Francisco and is visiting relatives on the peninsula.

Tibetan terrier 'Lasha,' held by owner John Mandurrgo, was one of the many costumed animals that appeared in the Halloween parade.

Rabbits as pets

IF YOU'RE thinking about adopting a bunny, there's a lot you should know before you make a decision.

First, visit the library and read about rabbits. There are many excellent books that will tell you all you need to know. We found a great soft-cover book called Rabbits as a New Pet, by Barry Martin, that's really great.

The most common complaint we hear is that the precious baby bunny that was so cute and cuddly a few months ago has become a terror. Rabbits are sexually mature at around five months of age and they are considered adults at one year. As they mature, they undergo a drastic personality change. Their behavior becomes unpredictable and they may bite or scratch. The solution is simple: spay or neuter and they will revert back to their lovable, sweet selves.

Rabbits don't make good pets for young children. Adult rabbits don't really enjoy cuddling and they can be seriously hurt if they're not handled properly.

Rabbits are very easy to feed. All of their nutritional requirements can be met by feeding cereals, green foods and vegetables. Don't feed candy! Tidbits should be choice foods like cheese, eggs or raisins.

A rabbit needs lots of exercise, and outdoor exercise is better than indoor. A good idea is to fence off a section of your yard. That way your bunny is contained with ample room to play.

Most rabbits need a companion rabbit to be happy. Single rabbits are likely to be bored and therefore more likely to get into trouble. I always say, two is better than one!

Properly-cared for rabbits live 12 to 15 years, so don't make a hasty decision. Once you adopt a rabbit, as with any pet, you must be willing to make a life-long commitment.

Hernias

A hernia results when an organ or tissue pokes through a hole in the abdominal wall. The two most common places to find hernias are around the navel or the groin. Puppies frequently have hernias and sometimes they will disappear by themselves. However, if you notice a small lump on your dog's underside while you're doing your regular "inspection" and grooming, have your veterinarian check it immediately. Some types of hernias can be life-threatening.

Treating burns

It's fairly rare for a pet to be burned, but it does happen. Barbecues, fireplaces and stoves all present a danger to curious noses and sensitive feet.

Your job is to give first aid — not medical treatment — by stabilizing the animal, then getting it to a veterinarian. Get lots of cold water on the burn area immediately to get the skin temperature down. Otherwise, the burned area will literally continue "cooking" deep into the tissue, causing more harm. Do not apply oil or grease.

If the burn seems to be superficial, apply a light, dry dressing like gauze. If the burn is deep, apply a wet gauze dressing. The bandage will keep the area clean and keep the animal from licking. Then, as I said, contact your veterinarian.

Above the Bottom Line

By JAMES P. CALANDRA, CPA

Of tax breaks and new club regulations

HERE'S SOME tax news you can use:

■ It was expected that some expired and soon-to-expire tax breaks would be reinstated as part of health care reform legislation.

However, Congress adjourned in October without bringing such legislation to a vote. Therefore, self-employed individuals will no longer be allowed to deduct 25 percent of their health insurance premiums. That deduction expired at the end of 1993.

The targeted jobs credit expires Dec. 31, as does the exclusion from taxable income of up to $5,250 of educational assistance provided by employers for workers. There is a possibility that these breaks could be retroactively reinstated as part of legislation in 1995...

■ The IRS recently issued proposed regulations defining "clubs" for the new tax provision that disallows a business deduction for club dues.

The deduction would be disallowed for dues paid to organizations formed with a principal purpose of providing access to entertainment facilities, such as country clubs, golf and athletic clubs, airline clubs, hotel clubs, and clubs operated to provide meals under circumstances not conducive to business discussion.

Dues would still be deductible for such organizations as bar and medical associations, business leagues, trade associations, chambers of commerce, boards of trade, and real estate boards.

Dues paid to civic organizations, such as Kiwanis, Lions and Rotary, would also continue to be deductible...

■ The IRS raised the interest rate it charges on overdue taxes and pays on overdue refunds, the second increase in as many quarters. For the last quarter of 1994, the IRS will charge 9 percent on tax underpayments and pay 8 percent on certain refunds...

■ A new IRS ruling is good news for businesses that want to operate as "S" corporations.

S corporations may have no more than 35 shareholders. The new ruling allows S corporations to form a partnership which, in effect, allows the 35 shareholder limit to be circumvented.

For example, if 70 individuals wanted to operate a business as an S corporation, they could form two separate S corporations and conduct business as a partnership...

Please note that any of the above information is general in nature and should not be acted upon without first checking with a professional to determine its applicability to your situation.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Day care centers for the elderly are multiplying rapidly throughout the United States. For one thing, they serve elderly parents who live with working couples and who cannot reasonably remain home alone all day. These centers differ greatly in the extent and quality of services. Regulation now varies from state to state, but the National Council on Aging is calling for uniform accreditation standards. In choosing an adult day care center, experts advise, look for a safe and clean environment, a trained staff and activities appropriate to an elder's condition.

Robert Haas, of Valhalla, New York, won medals for bravery as an Austrian army officer in World War I. But he had to flee Austria after the Nazis took over in 1938. In the United States he resumed his career and operated a studio noted for exquisite graphics and hand-press publishing. At age 95, Haas received a rare tribute. Austria's consul in New York presented him with one of that country's highest decorations for lifelong achievements in printing, calligraphy and photography.

Jeffries earns Shipnuck's support

Shipnuck has been re-elected three times, running unopposed in her last two campaigns, and currently is chairwoman of the board of supervisors and vice-chair of the Fort Ord Reuse Authority (FORA).

"I've been able to do what I do because I have a loyal staff, supportive friends and wonderful children," Shipnuck said.

Last year, she threw her hat into another political arena when she ran for the 17th District congressional seat vacated by Leon Panetta.

But unlike Shipnuck's earlier successes, she finished in third place in the Democratic primary behind eventual winner Sam Farr and current 27th Assembly District candidate Bill Monning.

"I don't know that it was so hard to lose," she said. "Losing is part of life. Within 36 hours after the election loss, I was on my way to a health forum across the county. What's incredible to me is how easily I raised more than $300,000 to spend for the election. There must be a way to spend that money for something more worthwhile."

Shipnuck considers her greatest accomplishment the establishment of Adolescents Caring for Themselves, a program that provides coordinated services for pregnant teenagers.

While preparing to write a speech that she would deliver at a conference on infant mortality, she discovered Monterey County had a higher teen pregnancy rate than the state average and was spending an estimated $200,000 per child born prematurely to teen mothers.

"I decided to do something about it," said Shipnuck, chairwoman of the National Association of Counties Children's Initiative Task Force. "It's my proudest achievement."

As a result of the program, Shipnuck said, the number of low-birth weight babies has decreased and there is a delay in repeat pregnancies. In addition, more girls are staying in high school, a fact also attributable to the program, she added.

In 16 years, the most difficult decision Shipnuck has made came last year, when the county's budget constraints made it necessary to vote for layoffs.

"It was the right decision," Shipnuck said. "But it was tough because someone was going to be out of a job. But we developed priorities and ended up reducing the number of layoffs from 100 to less than a dozen."

According to her friend and colleague, supervisor Sam Karas, Shipnuck's leadership strength comes from an ability to assess any situation from all sides and pinpoint what needs to be done to serve everyone's needs.

"Barbara and I are very close friends," said Karas,

5th District supervisor. "And even though we disagree on certain issues, I have the highest regard for her keen insight into a problem and her ability to come up with a solution in a very short period of time. She is probably one of the most brilliant persons I've had the good fortune to work with."

When Shipnuck leaves in January, the board will experience a void, because she is able to "fit into any camp," Karas said. "She stabilizes the issues. I'm going to miss her compassionate vote for the underprivileged, disadvantaged and elderly of Monterey County."

Fortunately, he noted, the present board works closely to make decisions based on the facts that are presented to them — without prejudice.

"The new supervisor will have to fit in," Karas added.

After 16 years as Monterey County supervisor, Barbara Shipnuck (above) will step down in January 1995.

Strongest board
Shipnuck believes all supervisors must act as a conduit for their constituents, but must make decisions that are in the best interests of the county as a whole.

"I think we currently have people on the board who can do that," she said. "This is the strongest board I've worked with since I've been here."

With all the county's diversity, Shipnuck noted each district's main concern is water.

"Both tourism and agriculture depend on water," she noted. "It's the most important issue facing the board of supervisors, and we are just beginning to talk the same language. I would hope the person who is elected can take a fairly broad perspective."

Russ Jeffries, 59, a former mayor of Salinas and 41-year-old Judy Pennycook, interim supervisor in 1992, are vying Tuesday for the District 2 seat.

Shipnuck, who worked with Pennycook for 18 months, has endorsed Jeffries.

"I think Russ is better able to take an overview of the entire county," Shipnuck said. "Russ has a lot of background with water issues. As mayor of Salinas, he worked on getting the Highway 101 Bypass in North County."

"Judy was on the board, she always talked about her community being North County at a time when she had a large population of constituents within Salinas. She didn't try to understand or bridge the gap between urban and suburban entities."

While leaving the board will be bittersweet, Shipnuck is looking forward to her future.

"When I first became supervisor, I woke up one morning and realized I'd changed from a housewife to an employer of 2,500 people," she remembered. "Now, I'll change from the highest elected woman in the county with 3,000 employees to whatever it is I go to in 1995."

Pennycook, Jeffries vie for Shipnuck's seat

"I would rather see the existing dam dredged," Jeffries said. "There are locations where the silt from the dam could be deposited. I don't believe building a new dam is the solution. It's extremely expensive."

Pennycook's primary governing experience was her appointment to serve on the board of supervisors in 1992, until the district she represented was realigned in 1993.

Pennycook, a businesswoman and former chairwoman of the North Monterey County Unified School District board, is currently a member of the Highway 101 Bypass Committee and an honorary member of the Monterey County Peace Officers Association.

Pennycook would rather explore diversion techniques and holding basins to capture some of the water that now runs out to sea from the Salinas River, rather than pipe water to Salinas from wells in South County.

"The lifeblood of Salinas Valley and Carmel Valley is water," Pennycook told The Pine Cone.

"The time for action is now."

But as for a new Los Padres Dam, she was less decisive: "I would need to have more information. It's a very sensitive issue. I'd need to study that as I've studied water issues in Salinas."

Regarding traffic, Jeffries said he wants to see improvements to Carmel Valley Road, but would not encourage any further widening of the thoroughfare to four lanes.

"I'm more for preserving the natural resources that we have. Widening Carmel Valley Road and building a new dam would allow for more growth in the area. I'm a growth control advocate. I think the people should have more advice on these issues."

Pennycook said her main concern would be safety.

"Coming from a rural area, I'm very conscious of scenic corridors," she said. "But I've also worked for 14 years to make highways and roads safe. I still support the decision the board made last year to adopt a short-term safety improvement plan, which includes widening Carmel Valley Road in some sections."

Hill, Fields square off in judges' contest; park district battle intensifies

ues and the occasions in which he has broken with Republican colleagues.

Monning points out that it is McPherson's best interests to distance himself from his party, since registered Democrats outnumber registered Republicans almost two-to-one in the Monterey Bay Area.

Also, McPherson, a retired editor at The Santa Cruz Sentinel, does not come out of a background in politics.

The race also includes O. Robert Welch, a Libertarian.

■ Office 3, Monterey County Superior Court: four-year term.

Judges races tend to be in a class by themselves, as judicial conduct is not conducive to political firefights. Judges should be above politics. But look closely, and you will note how a candidate can hope to seize an atmosphere of change.

In the primary earlier this year, Ann Hill earned more votes than a colleague (Albert Maldonado) in the Monterey County District Attorney's office and a private lawyer (Ralph Thompson, III). Only Monterey County Municipal Court Judge Michael Fields earned more votes.

While Fields has explained he must stay guarded in expressing opinions, Hill has seized the moment, taking tough stands of the hot issues of the day: "three-strikes, you're out," gun control and the death penalty. Her planks have been uniformly tough-on-crime, and her "victim's rights" platform is more than a tacit suggestion that those rights haven't been well enough represented.

As judge she is not supposed to make the laws, just apply them. But she has made her preferences no secret. In a year when crime has been the most important issue in many political races, Hill's candidacy arguably has been given a higher profile by her ability to carve herself out as a candidate of change.

Still, Fields has a kind of incumbent status, as voters inevitably will invest much more importance in his municipal court credentials and note the word "Judge" before his name.

■ Ward 5, Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District: four-year term.

Businesswoman-Realtor Barbara Hulse is a hard hitter: The 13-year board member Zad Leavy, she declares, serves on a board that oversteps its authority, and it is time for a change. She also accuses Leavy, general counsel to the Big Sur Land Trust, of having an inherent conflict of interest.

Leavy, meanwhile, stands by a long list of park district acquisitions—thousands of acres of open space—as proof of his hard work and accomplishments, and accuses his opponent of distorting the facts.

Who says low-profile special-district elections must always go unnoticed? Hulse's platform of "balance" and greater concern for private-property rights once again strike at the notion of change.

In hoping to block the kind of change he views as unwelcome, District Manager Gary Tate has forsaken neutrality and declared his support for Leavy.

At stake in Hulse's candidacy, Tate suggests, is not just a new composition of the five-member board, but the mission of the district itself.

The polls on Tuesday will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Sierra Club gives nod to Monning

THE LOCAL chapter of the Sierra Club went back for a second try, and finally it has found a candidate for the 27th Assembly District — Bill Monning.

Last month, The Carmel Pine Cone reported that the 10-member executive committee of the Ventana Chapter failed to come up with the necessary seven votes to endorse either incumbent Bruce McPherson or his Democratic challenger. Apparently, neither candidate passed the Sierra Club test. But the executive committee revisited the endorsement issue, found their seven votes, and concluded thus:

"Monning's platform calls for a stronger state role in taking on critical environmental issues, all the way from salt-water intrusion and pesticide contamination to such global issues as overpopulation and ozone-depleting chemicals," as Peter Scott, a longtime Sierra Club leader explained.

Pirates drub PG; host Gonzales in key tilt Saturday

■ Sams, Prowell break loose to keep RLS in CCS playoff hunt.

By BROOKS FOSTER

EVERYTHING CAME together for the Robert Louis Stevenson varsity football team last Friday night in Pacific Grove as it dominated on both offense and defense en route to a 38-13 thrashing of the Breakers.

Riding a two-game winning streak, the Pirates, 4-4 overall, will host Gonzales High in a Mission Trail Athletic League game at 2 p.m. Saturday at Alumni Field. Gonzales is fresh off a come-from-behind 14-10 victory over Carmel, a team RLS defeated 54-24 two weeks ago.

The season finale on Nov. 11 will come against Alisal, which dropped its first game of the 1994 campaign — a 42-6 to Palma. There is still the possibility that the Pirates, with wins over Gonzales and Alisal, can advance for the second straight season to the Central Coast Section playoffs.

Spartans pose concerns

But before RLS shifts its attention to Alisal, the Pirates can't afford to overlook Gonzales, 3-4 overall and 2-2 in the MTAL. And defensive coach Dave Miller is priming his troops for the Spartans' attack.

"Gonzales has a similar offense to PG's — specializing in the fly," Miller said. The pressure is on with these two upcoming games, and the team is excited and motivated."

If Stevenson's performance against PG is an indication of things, the Pirates could be playoff-bound. Several players put up incredible numbers.

Senior running back Mike Prowell showed the Breakers he had recovered from a twisted knee suffered the week before against Carmel as he churned out 140 yards on only 14 carries. He scored three consecutive touchdowns during a span of less than 12 minutes in the second and third quarters, which hiked Stevenson's lead from 9-7 to 31-7.

Even though Prowell excelled again — he scored five TDs against Carmel on Oct. 22 — junior Brandon Sams shared in much of the post-game spotlight. For it was Sams who scored the first and last Stevenson touchdowns on breakaway runs of 49 and 73 yards. He finished with 160 yards on only eight carries.

On defense, the RLS backfield showed considerable improvement, while some of the team's young talent made a considerable impact on the line. Junior Rory Smith led the way with seven tackles and five assists. Senior Sekou Sanyika put up similar numbers.

Among the defensive backs, Laith Agha and Ryan Anderson made key contributions. On the line, the coaches lauded the efforts of Mike Nevis and Ed Lambert.

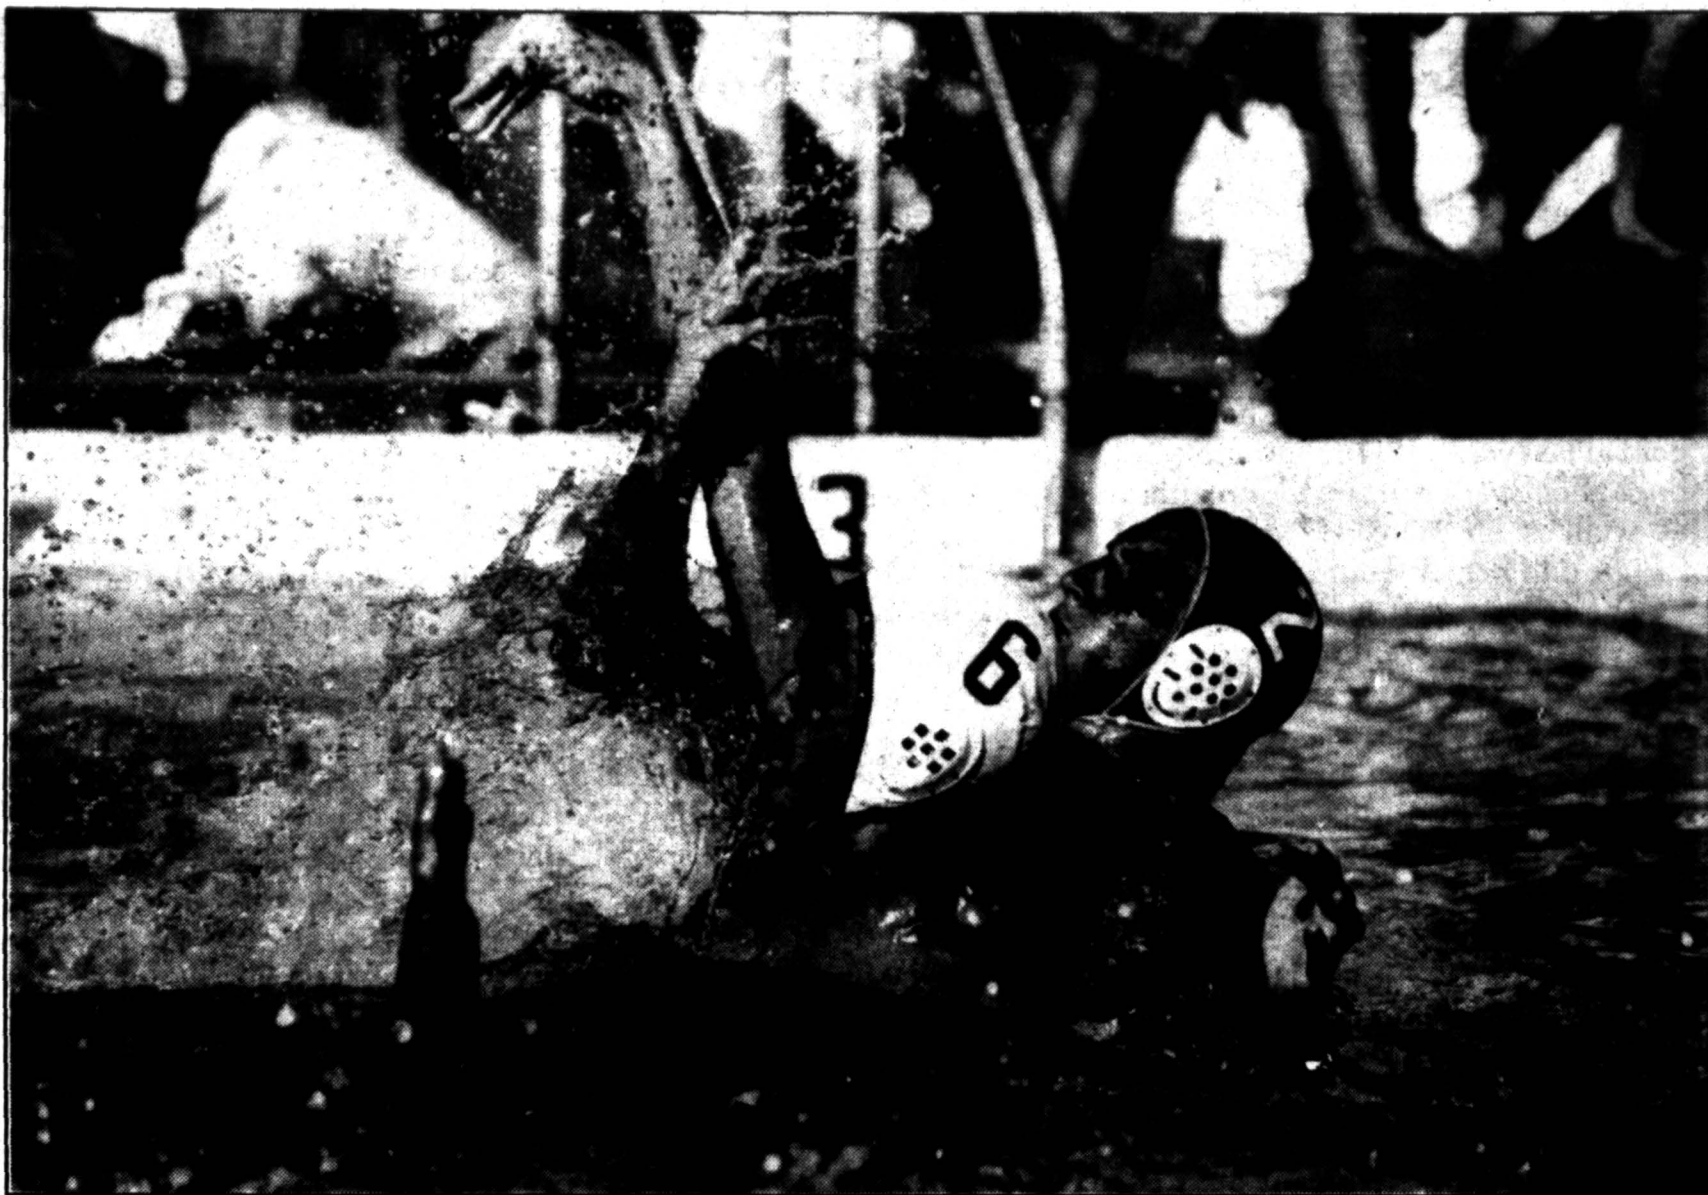

It is significant to note that RLS caught a break in that the Breakers' star running back Steve Alvernaz was sidelined with an illness. The loss dropped PG's record to 1-7 overall and 0-4 in the MTAL.

Both Stevenson's junior varsity and freshmen teams were on the losing ends last Friday night — PG won the JV game 24-14 and the frosh contest 6-0.

Water polo team cracks Acorns' MTAL streak

THE CARMEL High School water polo team accomplished something no team in the Mission Trail Athletic League has done in a long time — knock off the Live Oak Acorns.

The records haven't officially been checked, but one report commented that the Padres' 18-17 double-overtime win last Thursday at home was the first league loss Live Oak had suffered since 1978!

Carmel led through most of three quarters of play, and found itself in command late in the fourth, leading by one goal. However, when Carmel attempted to run out the clock with seconds remaining, an Acorn player managed to steal the ball, sprint down the pool, and fire in the game-tying goal and send the contest into overtime.

After a scoreless three-minute overtime quarter, Carmel squeezed out the Oct. 27 victory in the second extra period on a Cody Johnson goal with under half a minute remaining.

The Padre defense held tight throughout the marathon and, at the finish, goalie Paul Zurlinden had grabbed 18 saves on the afternoon. Zurlinden has been a consistent cog in the Padres' arsenal, and has quickly emerged as one of MTAL's finest goalies.

The win avenged an Oct. 4 loss at Live Oak.

Carmel also defeated North Salinas 20-9 last week, and stands one game behind Live Oak with a 7-2 league record. The Padres have three more games remaining on their regular season schedule — against Salinas today and Hollister on Tuesday.

■ CROSS COUNTRY

The boys and girls teams traveled to Garland Ranch last Thursday to compete against Stevenson and York. In the boys' race, Carmel was without junior runner Brian Johnson, and the Padres' ace runner Bart Rowley also was unable to compete.

With these runners absent, junior Jacob Jara knew he had to step up and did just that, finishing a respectable tenth followed by Padre running mate John Pfeiffer.

"Jacob Jara was wonderful," said a happy John Ables, CHS coach.

The Padre girls also found themselves somewhat depleted do to the fall break.

"I knew in the matchup, we were in a little trouble because three of the girls couldn't practice do to the vacation," Ables said.

The Padres, however, still ran a great race, finishing second behind host York. Once again, Molly Allen, Denise Cardimone, Malia Seltzer and Adele Woytak led the pack, and a meager four seconds was the difference between York and Carmel.

Regardless, the Carmel girls are 7-2, and the most important race — the MTAL Championships will be held today at Toro Park at 2:30 p.m. today. According to Ables, everything is riding on this race.

"Eighty-six percent of the final standings depends on this, and only 14 percent on the wins and losses during league," he said.

Gridders get week off after losing at Gonzales

By AMIR MASLIYAH

AFTER FALLING to Gonzales last Friday night in a solid performance, the Carmel High School varsity football team has two weeks to prepare for the biggest game of the year — Homecoming and "The Shoe Game" versus Mission Trail Athletic League foe Pacific Grove.

PG, 1-7 overall and 0-4 in the MTAL prior to its game Friday night against Alisal, is "definitely beatable," according to Craig Johnston, CHS head coach. But Breakers' star running back Steve Alvernaz, with 1,200 yards in only seven games, could present some problems for Carmel.

Alvernaz was absent due to illness during PG's 38-13 loss to Robert Louis Stevenson last Friday night.

"We have two weeks to prepare," said Johnston of his team that has a bye this weekend and will take a

BRUCE FLEISHER will be back to defend his title at the 1994 Pebble Beach Invitational, scheduled for Nov. 17-20 over three Monterey Peninsula golf courses.

The tournament, now in its 23rd year, is the lone event to feature men and women professionals in head-to-head competition for equal prize money. (The women are given a distance advantage off the tees.)

Tournament play for the first three days will rotate over Pebble Beach, Spyglass Hill and Old Del Monte golf courses. The final round on Sunday, Nov. 20 will be played at Pebble Beach.

Advance sale gallery tickets, priced at $30 for all four days, can be purchased by calling the tournament office at 484-2151, or by writing to P.O. Box M, Carmel, CA 93921.

Carmel Valley triathlete shines at world championships in Hawaii

By DOUG THOMPSON

SO WHAT were you doing between 7 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 15? Perhaps some breakfast, maybe a round of golf, a little gardening followed by a leisurely afternoon nap? Then again, it's possible you don't even remember.

But there's a 31-year-old carpenter in Carmel Valley who will never forget what he accomplished on that day nearly three weeks ago.

In the race that is equivalent to the Super Bowl for triathletes, Stacy Van Horn crossed the finish line of the Gatorade Iron Man World Championships in 10 hours, 32 minutes and 36 seconds — good for 353rd overall in a field of 1,500.

Exactly how did Van Horn spend his Saturday in Kailua-Kona on the Big Island of Hawaii? He and his competitors started with a 2.4-mile ocean swim, which would have been difficult enough had Van Horn not, at the outset, received a kick in the eye from a swimmer ahead of him.

"The swim was the toughest part," said Van Horn, who finished 88th out of the 230 entrants in his 30 to 34 age division. "It was hard to get a good rhythm going."

After Van Horn completed the swim in 1:08, he left the water and hopped on his bicycle with a goal of completing the 112-mile course in five hours. But a cramp in the arch of his foot caused him to lose an hour and he came in at 6:03.

Marathon man

Then it was on to Van Horn's specialty — the 26.2-mile run, or marathon, just what anybody would have the energy to do following an hour swim in the Pacific Ocean and a bike ride equal to the distance from Monterey to San Francisco.

Local sponsors rally behind CV's Van Horn

LIKE ANY amateur triathlete, Stacy Van Horn, who holds down a full-time job and boasts a comprehensive training schedule, needs sponsors to help him along the way.

"I really have to dig for pennies sometimes to make it to these races," Van Horn told The Carmel Pine Cone in a profile published Aug. 11.

Things were made a little easier for Van Horn, 31, in the recently completed Gatorade Iron Man World Championships because some local individuals and companies came to his aid.

Sponsoring the Carmel Valley resident's way through training and participating in the Hawaii event were: Alan and Rita Shugart of Pebble Beach; Borregaard and Manni Construction; Ingram Plastering; Hayward Lumber and Chappell Masonry. And Katy Curry's Wagon Wheel Coffee Shop in Carmel Valley kept him fed in the weeks leading up to the Oct. 15 triathlon.

"Without their help," Van Horn said, "I couldn't have gone. Or at least I would have over there sleeping on the beach!"

For Stacy Van Horn, the triathlon was finally over 10 hours and 30 minutes after it all began.

But Van Horn, who conquered the foot cramp, was ready for the challenge. And as he neared the end of the run — about 5:30 p.m. Hawaii time — Van Horn says he won't forget the rush.

"There were thousands of people lining the finish line," he recalled. "They were rooting for everybody. It was such a great feeling. I was exhausted, but it's a feeling you'll never forget."

Van Horn, who had qualified for the world championships at the Vineman Triathlon in Santa Rosa, contends he would have met his pre-race goal of 9:30 had it not been for the foot cramp. The overall winner, Greg Welch of Australia, crossed the finish line in 8:20.27.

Rolling on the river

So did Van Horn relax when he finally returned to his Carmel Valley home? He took a few days off before participating in the Oct. 22 Big Sur River Run, an annual 10K event. And if he was feeling the effects of the rigorous months of training for the triathlon just a week earlier, Van Horn didn't show it. He finished in second place.

Buoyed by this year's effort, he's already thinking ahead to next year's world championships, along with the aspiration to be a top-50 finisher. He may take a stab at a triathlon in March in New Zealand with hopes of earning an early qualification for next year's event in Hawaii. Not surprisingly, Van Horn already has the date memorized: Oct. 7, 1995.

You can bet he will take full advantage of the next 11 months to properly prepare.

Athletes eye CCS action before season 'falls' by the wayside

WITH THE last regular season matchups of the fall sports schedule occurring this week in nearly all sports, many Robert Louis Stevenson athletes, some for the final time, bid farewell to the promises and hopes they held for their teams at the beginning of the season.

Others are wrapping up their successful Mission Trail Athletic League endeavors and preparing for league and CCS championships in the coming weeks. In both cases, the competitors are victorious for having completed an extensive, often tiring season, with considerable perseverance and effort.

The Pirates' season gradually led to the finales with a host of events this past week. Some teams enjoyed moderate success, others encountered some unexpected disappointment. Here's a run-down:

■ GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

The Notre Dame Spirits handed the Pirate girls a discouraging loss last Thursday, downing Stevenson 16-14, 10-15, 15-10, 15-13. The Pirates had hoped to enter the final match of the season versus league-leading Gonzales with only three losses, but the Spirits avenged an earlier loss in September.

The Pirates had many of their juniors out of practice for the first three days of the week because of a class trip, and also faced an extended weekend which thinned the practicing ranks. They hope to be more prepared as they face the Spartans today at home.

Stevenson now has an 8-4 league record, and is in third place behind Gonzales and King City, with Notre Dame just behind at 8-5. A competitive race for the CCS berths has emerged, with RLS hopeful for a spot.

■ CROSS COUNTRY

The runners traveled to Garland Park in Carmel Valley on Thursday for a meet with Carmel and the host school, York. The Pirate boys were steady in the middle, behind York yet ahead of Carmel.

The girls fell to both teams despite strong finishes. Sophomore Erin Miller came in fourth, which represented first for the Pirates, just ahead of Tegan Firth, who placed sixth. Nao Hattori, also a junior, finished 10th.

Senior Pete West led the boys again with a first-place finish in the meet, three seconds ahead of fellow senior Damian Crevello, who placed second in the meet, his best finish of the year. Freshman Jed Thompson showed promise for the coming years by placing an outstanding ninth.

The MTAL Championships are being held today at Toro Park, with West more than capable of taking first his final Stevenson league race.

■ GIRLS TENNIS

The Pirates entered their final two matches with a bang, stifling the Gonzales Spartans last Thursday with a 6-0 victory. Fielding a relatively young squad for the match, the girls lost only 10 games and no sets in the victory.

Senior Imke Petzel and sophomore Lee-Ann Smith, in the first and third spots, trounced their opponents with 6-0, 6-0 triumphs. The No. 2 doubles team of sophomores Lisa Kroopf and Zoe Johns defeated their counterparts, 6-0, 6-0.

CHS junior varsity wins again, lifts mark to 6-2

six-game losing streak into the 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 12 game. "We're going to hit the weight room, and give some of the guys who are banged up an opportunity to heal."

Against Gonzales, the visiting Padres overcame piercing night air and painful injuries only to witness the Spartans score a late fourth-quarter touchdown to pull out a 14-10 win.

"The bottom line is we played a lot better," Johnston said.

Carmel, 2-6 overall and 0-5 in the MTAL, looked like a different team than the one that showed up in Pebble Beach a week earlier against Stevenson. The players were fired up from the opening kickoff, and the defense fought off blocks to hold the Spartans to just one touchdown for three quarters and eight minutes.

If not for two costly fumbles late in the second half, with Carmel leading by three points, the outcome most likely would have been different.

The Padres were highlighted by John Geisler's 10-for-14 passing for 174 yards and Dustin Nagai's 89 yards off four receptions.

Other standouts, according to Johnston, were sophomore wide receiver Robbie Shepner and senior line-backer Lee Murray.

In a wacky junior varsity game, Carmel, now 6-2, held off the Spartans 20-16.

Ben Armbrust, Colter Bissell, Golden Anderson and Jo Jo Crewell played well, and the Carmel defense stifled the Spartan attack late in the game to hold on to the victory.

Eastwood announces AT&T Pro-Am purse hiked to $1.4 million

The increase, which was announced this week by Clint Eastwood, chairman of the AT&T Pebble Beach

Golf Foundation, places the tournament in the top 10 percent of PGA Tour purses.

Tickets are currently on sale for the '95 tournament and may be purchased through the AT&T office (1-800-541-9091) or BASS ticket outlets. Ticket prices are $15 per day for the practice rounds on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and $25 for the subsequent four tournament rounds.

Season badges may be purchased for $70 before Dec. 15 and $85 after that date. Grounds and grandstand badges sell for $100.

The 1994 AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am raised more than $1.5 million for charity.

Farr clear choice for Congress

AS SAM Farr fights to keep his congressional seat, his campaign looks like a microcosm for a nationwide phenomenon: Experienced Democrats appear to be in trouble in regional and gubernatorial battles.

In the 17th Congressional District, Farr faces Bill McCampbell, a Pebble Beach attorney and small business owner with no record in elected office. In any other election year, Farr wouldn't be too concerned about holding on to a district that is overwhelmingly Democratic.

But he is running scared, and the news reports lead us to believe he is not alone. A low turnout and a shift among middle-of-the-road voters may send Farr home to Carmel.

While the burden of proof has been on McCampbell's shoulders to prove the district needs him instead of Farr, we believe he has not succeeded in this challenge.

Farr is an experienced, well-rounded public servant who has represented the district well, particularly on the crucial Fort Ord conversion issue. The Carmel Pine Cone strongly endorses Sam Farr's re-election.

Sam Farr

Third time out

The former 13-year assemblyman came to Congress in a June 1993 special election. Meanwhile, this is McCampbell's third try, the second being against Farr last year.

With some degree of accuracy, Farr has described McCampbell's candidacy as "canned." The challenger has adopted generic conservative planks without backing them up with sufficient detail.

McCampbell has identified areas of public discontent through polling, and hammered away at conservative standbys like crime and the death penalty, taxation, immigration and big government. Meanwhile, his discourse on issues of regional concern, like the environment, Fort Ord reuse and implementation of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary, has been shallow at best.

Although we respect his tough-on-crime plank, he undermines his credibility by failing to say decisively how he would have voted on the crime bill passed (which Farr supported) during the 103rd Congress.

McCampbell is clearest and most consistent on his position not to accept political action committee (PAC) money. But his relentless portrayal of Farr as some kind of corrupt career politician and liberal big-spender is an obvious distortion.

The experience issue aside, Farr is less of an ideologue and more a pragmatist. He proved his ability to compromise by supporting NAFTA, which he originally opposed. McCampbell might contend Farr gave in to pressure on that issue, while Farr maintains he was merely listening to the desires of his constituents.

In addition, Farr has steadily followed through on the legislation and land transfers necessary for the new campus at Fort Ord.

He has yet to become the towering figure of his predecessor, Leon Panetta, but he effectively wields political muscle for this district in a way McCampbell is unlikely to develop. Farr would be our choice to fight the potential closures at the Defense Language Institute or the Naval Postgraduate School.

The current public mood will surely make a significant mark on Tuesday's elections, and the new balance of power, in turn, will affect the course of legislation. Democrats, from President Clinton to Farr, will have to take stock of the new political outlook.

But, here in the 17th District, we need solid leadership from someone who knows and understands Washington, the state and the Monterey Bay region. That person is clearly Sam Farr.

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. Letters should not exceed 350 words in length. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address, telephone number and signature, and preferably be typed and double spaced. Anonymous letters, or those with no phone numbers will not be accepted.

PARK DISTRICT

Leavy's leadership needed

Dear Editor:

As you walked along a quiet trail at Garland Park, hiked or biked the Recreational Trail from Pacific Grove to Monterey, or picnicked on the grass at Carmel Valley Community Park, did it ever occur to you who is responsible for acquiring these parks for all of us to enjoy?

You can thank the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District and, in particular, one member who has served on that board for 13 years — Zad Leavy.

Zad has shown the dedication and foresight, along with his fellow board members, in considering and pursuing the purchases of numerous properties that otherwise would have been developed. These parcels have now been preserved as parks and open spaces and are visited daily by the citizens of Monterey County, as well as visitors from across the United States and around the world.

Some people have criticized Zad for holding a position on both the park district board, a public agency, and as general counsel for the Big Sur Land Trust, a private non-profit agency he helped to organize. The philosophies of these two agencies go hand in hand. They are both dedicated to preserving and protecting the natural resources of this beautiful area. Consequently, these lands have been set aside as parks and are available for each of us here today to enjoy and appreciate as well as providing a legacy for future generations.

It is imperative that we re-elect Zad Leavy to Ward 5 of the park district board. We need his leadership and expertise along with the continuity he can provide. He will work to carry out the park district's stated mission of acquisition and preservation for the public benefit.

Carmel Meadows

Hulsey deserves vote

Dear Editor:

It is time to vote in some badly needed change at the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District.

The current board of directors have acted as though the district was their personal public agency — to do with as they and their friends pleased. Projects are pursued using millions of taxpayer dollars regardless of need or public sentiment.

One such project began as a proposal by the Big Sur Land Trust for a regional park in the Palo Colorado Canyon area. The property abuts the National Forest and a Forest Service campground, but has been pursued by the district in spite of opposition by the local community and a petition by the citizens of the entire district.

The district continues to try and acquire land there, though due to poor access, use will be limited to only a handful of people a day.

Barbara Hulsey is running for director Leavy's seat on the board. She believes there should be a balance between the acquisition of land, fiscal responsibility and public need and sentiment.

She believes the park district's focus should be to provide services for the people of the district. She deserves the vote of the people in Ward 5 (Carmel, Carmel Valley, Big Sur, and Pebble Beach) on Tuesday.

Michael Caplin
Carmel

Keep Leavy on board

Dear Editor:

It is important that residents of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District's Ward 5 show our support for Zad Leavy in Tuesday's election. His re-election is essential if the park district is to be able to continue the excellent job it has been doing.

Zad Leavy has consistently led the board in its decisions enhancing our quality of life and strengthening our local economy by helping to attract more eco-tourists. His supporters cover the entire political spectrum and include prominent local businessmen and women, attorneys, educators, elected officials, members of the financial community, environmentalists and scientists. In the opinion of many, he is the most creative and resourceful member of the park board in its 22-year history.

The park district has greatly benefited residents of the 5th Ward by creating or helping to create parks like Garland Regional Park, Carmel Valley Community Park and Cachagua Community Park and by preserving open space and natural areas such as Mill Creek Preserve and Cougar Gulch in Big Sur, the Kahn Ranch and Blomquist property in Cachagua.

All this is being threatened by candidates who appear to be trying to reverse much of what the park district has accomplished. One of these candidates is trying to unseat Leavy. If the three can-

Not supporting and not voting for Leavy will allow the election of a candidate who represents a minority view favoring development over conservation of our most beautiful natural treasures. A vote for Zad Leavy means supporting the capable and cost-effective job that the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District is doing and will continue to do if allowed.

Dick Dalsemer

Balance is already there

Dear Editor:

Since the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District was established in the 1970s, we have benefited mightily from the actions of the district's dedicated, constructive and active board of directors.

For the last 13 years, Zad Leavy has been a strong member of the board as it pursued its mission of obtaining park lands and preserving critical open space.

Now we are told that Zad Leavy should be replaced by a realtor who would provide "balance." What nonsense!

I am sure thoughtful voters will agree that the present board's actions, both past and planned for the future, have and will best serve this environmentally sensitive community. Remember the outstanding natural beauty of our area is one of the major attractions tourists come to enjoy and hence support our important hospitality industry.

With Zad Leavy on the park district board, the "balance" couldn't be better!

Rod and Anne Mills
Carmel Valley

Dollars and sense issue

Dear Editor:

If there was ever a time when an election came down to dollars and cents, it is now, with the need to replace the three open seats on the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District.

■ Zad Leavy's board spent $1.25 million to purchase acreage in Palo Colorado Canyon — money squandered because the land is adjacent to a large camping area owned by the U.S. Forest Service. Did any of us need more?

■ When the California Coastal Commission and the Monterey County Board of Supervisors granted a permit for a family's approved home in the Carmel Highlands, the park board brought suit against the supervisors. (Would you believe it: Last week they asked the supervisors to loan money to the park district — to cover their expenses?)

■ Leavy was served with a complaint from the California Fair Political Practices Commission saying, "Specifically I find probable cause to believe that he violated the Act's conflict of interest provisions..." FPPC No. 89/81, 9/13/91.

That's just a few examples of many that should end Mr. Leavy's 13-year reign.

On Tuesday, vote for Barbara Hulse and remove Zad Leavy from office in Ward 5. In Pacific Grove and Pebble Beach, vote for Mike McNally, and in Monterey and the remainder of the peninsula cities, vote for Pete Buechel.

Lois Starnes
Carmel

The environmental candidates

Dear Editor:

Tuesday is going to be an important day of decision for environmental protection on the Monterey Peninsula.

The Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District is up for grabs. Three seats are open with two candidates running for one seat. After several decades of preserving thousands of acres of parks and open spaces from Big Sur to Marina and from upper Carmel Valley to the western edge of the peninsula, the choice is clear if you want this excellent work of the district to continue.

Vote for Mary Dainton for the Pacific Grove Ward, for Judi Ellis for the Monterey Ward and for Zad Leavy for the Carmel-Big Sur Ward. All three have outstanding conservation records and are committed to carry on the special mission for which the district was formed by public acclaim in the early 1970s.

Another critical election which involves not only the quality of life on the Monterey Peninsula, but also for the entire county is our congressional race where Sam Farr is the environmental standard bearer.

Sam's conservation record in the California legislature was splendid and he carries those strong credentials to Congress where he supported Yellowstone Park protection, the California Desert Protection bill, the Colorado Wilderness, the Everglades National Park improvement, Montana wilderness additions, creation of the Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area and creation of the Public Lands Corps. That is a great record.

We are fortunate to have these four candidates willing to put their energies to work on our behalf. They have earned our votes.

Joyce Stevens
Carmel

Fresh approach needed

Dear Editor:

Does anyone know what is going on at the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District?

The park district is suing Monterey County and a Carmel Highlands couple over the building permit issued for their home.

It seems to me this is what frequently happens when a public agency distances itself from its constituents and takes on an imperious manner. Of course this is aggravated by the low public attendance at their meetings. The result is a tendency for regional park directors to act on their own personal agendas, confusing them with the "public interest."

Several parkland and open space acquisitions have been foolish expenditures because we are unable to use them. The better purchases, like Garland Park, really need to have security beefed up in light of recent incidents statewide.

And the park district board, after several years of foot-dragging must now adopt a general plan to serve as a strategic road map for the entire peninsula, rather than spending its time giving our citizens, cities, and the county a nightmare of intimidation and litigation.

For these reasons, I believe that Tuesday's elections provide an opportunity for a fresh approach. A vote for Barbara Hulse (Ward 5: Carmel, Carmel Valley, Big Sur, Pebble Beach), Mike McNally (Ward 4: Pacific Grove and New Monterey) and Pete Buechel (Ward 3: Monterey) should ensure that prudent fiscal management and public participation return to our regional park board. They are urgently needed.

Ed Messick
Carmel

Urge Leavy's re-election

Dear Editor:

Everyone on the peninsula owes a debt of gratitude to the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District for making a real difference in the quality of our lives by its long-standing record of preserving open space and parklands.

The park district is the only agency which focuses exclusively on the preservation of open space and recreational parklands, and it has purchased much valuable property at fair market value from willing sellers throughout the peninsula during the last 20 years.

I urge everyone to vote to re-elect Zad Leavy as director of park district Ward 5. He has provided continued leadership in the protection of thousands of acres along the Big Sur Coast and on the Monterey Peninsula. He deserves your vote!

Michael D. DeLapa

SUPERVISOR

Return Pennycook to office

Dear Editor:

The voters of Monterey County's Second Supervisorial District have the unique opportunity and good fortune to be able to vote for Judy Pennycook.

Judy is singularly well qualified to serve as a member of the board of supervisors. She has demonstrated her abilities while previously serving as supervisor and would still be there had not redistricting obliged her to wait until now to earn her seat back again.

Her service as a supervisor and chairman of the board have brought the applause of men and women of both political parties and has earned their strong support.

Pennycook's knowledge of her district, her straightforward candor, intelligence and energy in solving the many problems facing a growing and diverse area are qualities which are indeed rare in these turbulent times. She has demonstrated she can be tough on crime, sensitive to the needy and homeless and a leader for economic development. She knows that jobs can be scarce but she has the intelligence to see that Monterey County responds to the call for more jobs and greater economic security for all.

Pennycook's record of accomplishment in public service reads like a chapter in Who's Who. Her business experience and her dedication to excellence in education add to her vast array of qualifications. And she is young enough and energetic enough to continue to provide

ASSEMBLY

Candidate with compassion

Dear Editor:

English writer George Orwell stated that "the more one is conscious of one's political bias, the more chance one has of acting politically without sacrificing one's esthetic and intellectual integrity."

His comment gives food for thought on the current political campaigns for state and local office. I know that my own bias puts me in the camp of the more progressive reformers, but I do keep an open mind and go with the issues, not the political party.

My priorities and values aren't represented by Gov. Wilson's tough, anti-crime agenda. Fortunately, there are candidates running for office that have more constructive approaches to societal problems. Bill Monning, running for 27th District Assembly seat, is one. As I tend to be biased in favor of workers' rights and issues relating to economic democracy, I admire the fact that when Monning came out of law school, he went to work for the United Farmworkers of America and later was an attorney with the California Rural Assistance Migrant Farmworker Project. Monning also worked to enact workplace safety legislation, as a founder of the Central Coast Pesticide Coalition in 1978.

When Monning's wife was accepted to medical school back east, Monning gave up his law practice in Salinas and helped put his wife through medical school, taking a job on the East Coast as executive director of the International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, a group awarded the 1985 Nobel Peace Prize.

Some may perceive a candidate with strong convictions and principles as being uncompromising and narrow. Monning has dealt with numerous local agencies and international entities, and he recently organized a course in negotiation, mediation and conflict resolution at MHS — experience that will serve him in good stead as a legislator in Sacramento. ~9

Social and economic justice, coupled with environmental awareness and dedication to improved health care and educational parity — not a "status-quo" agenda, but a forward-looking, compassionate set of priorities. Oops, my bias is showing.

Judy Karas
Pacific Grove

McPherson friend of education

Dear Editor:

I am a teacher at Pacific Grove High School, and I am supporting the reelection of Bruce McPherson as our assemblyman for the 27th District.

Bruce has been a strong supporter of public education all his life. He has introduced legislation to insure that 95 percent of our educational dollars go directly to the classroom. He believes the best educational decisions are made at the local level, and he is always looking for creative ways to improve our schools.

Bruce was very instrumental in working along with Sen. Henry Mello in bringing Cal State Monterey Bay to the Fort Ord site. His patience and persistence helped nurture this complex and difficult legislation through its arduous process, and the whole Monterey Peninsula will benefit from his efforts.

Bruce is a consensus builder, he works extremely well with his colleagues in the state legislature, and he is a good listener to all the various groups in our district.

I hope you will join me and the California Teachers Association and give your vote to Bruce McPherson.

Barbara Woolman

CONGRESS

Time for a change

Dear Editor:

Can Sam Farr ever tell the truth? He said in public that he was against the invasion of Haiti; yet his voting record demonstrates he supported Clinton all the way.

It is just incredible that Farr would try to give a false impression to us to distance himself from Bill Clinton when in fact he has faithfully supported the Clinton White House.

On NAFTA, Farr voted with Bill Clinton.

On gays in the military, Farr voted with Clinton.

On the highest tax increase in U.S. history, Farr voted with Clinton. On the crime bill that was bloated with wasteful spending, Farr voted yet again with Clinton.

On the balanced budget amendment, Farr voted with Clinton and opposed it.

With friends like Farr and Clinton, who needs enemies?

Farr is the best argument I've seen yet for term limits and campaign finance reform. It's time to vote him out of office and to end Farr's 18-year career in politics representing this area!

Let's elect Bill McCampbell this time around and make our votes count for real change, not more of the same.

Robert J. Moffatt
Carmel

What is McCampbell's 'fight'?

Dear Editor:

Many 17th Congressional District residents have been seeing, hearing or reading Bill McCampbell's campaign material and wondering just who he is.

His entire campaign has been a negative one. At no time has he indicated any positive plans for job creation, Fort Ord transition, environmental and tourist industry enhancement, agricultural interests, or anything else.

Just what is his "fight"?

His campaign literature is so misleading that nowhere on it does he mention that he's a Republican. What is he so ashamed of? And what else has he left out that we voters should know?

Do we really need to be represented by someone who tries to fool us on where he stands? Let's re-elect Congressman Sam Farr, whose honesty, integrity and service to the community has been unquestionable for his entire life.

Bonni M. Weinstein
Carmel

Fed up with Farr

Dear Editor:

What are PACs? They are Political Action Committees formed to influence politicians. Their influence is mostly assured by cash payments they make to selected politicians. In other words, they pay politicians to buy their votes. Sam Farr is on many PAC lists as a politician who is easily swayed by their donations.

I examined donations to Farr in the primary election last summer. (The donations for the fall election are not yet available.) It appears that Sam gets the vast majority of his campaign funding from PACs as 32 of the 37 contributors were PACs. All the special interests want Farr in Congress where they can tell him how to vote.

What is especially annoying is that Farr attempts to take credit for all the good work that Leon Panetta has done for the district. I, for one, am fed up — let's get rid of Farr in this election. Show outside interests that pouring their money into his campaign won't work.

Patricia A. Leslie
Pebble Beach

PROPOSITIONS

Prop. 187 catastrophic

Dear Editor:

My family immigrated to California from Mexico 219 years ago (with the DeAnza expedition of 1775). My great, great, great, great grandfather was one of the founders of the city of San Francisco. Like the vast majority of immigrants since then, they worked hard and contributed to a better future for the state.

Most immigrants help our economy, provide services, and working-age immigrants are less likely to be on welfare than the native-born.

If you are afraid that schools don't have enough resources to go around, contribute to your schools! If you are afraid of crime, support police, organize your neighborhood! If you are afraid that jobs will be in short supply, educate yourself and train for a better future!

Don't point your finger at any other group and make them responsible for your weakness, irresponsibility, and fear.

Proposition 187 on the Nov. 8 ballot is racist in origin, cruel in intent, and catastrophic in effect.

California's future belongs to those who are willing to sacrifice, work hard, and educate themselves. And their birthplace doesn't matter.

Carl Cherry Center presents new theatrical event

■ Contemporary Carmel Theater Festival provides a forum for talented, up-and-coming performers.

By IVY WESTON

THE CARL Cherry Center for the Arts will host the first Contemporary Carmel Theatre Festival, featuring original plays and dance pieces, staged readings, master classes and workshops, Friday through Sunday at the center, Guadalupe and Fourth in Carmel.

The festival is the brainchild of Del Rey Oaks resident Robin McKee, a seasoned theatre director. Before moving to the Peninsula two years ago, McKee worked as a producer in Los Angeles, and continues to do so periodically.

Her specialty is in showcasing up-and-coming playwrights, actors and musicians. She has worked with artists at the Mark Taper Forum in L.A., as well as the L.A. Opera.

She also directed Far End of the Earth for the Festival of Firsts here in Carmel last year, and led the Telluride Repertory Theatre Festival in Colorado, which she will do again this year.

Despite her busy schedule, McKee was not fully satisfied; something was missing.

"Even though I was working a lot, I felt like I wanted something that was mine," McKee said. "I had already been working with new performance artists, new plays. It was important to me to have a place where those people could come and give air to their new ideas."

She felt that by bringing them to Carmel, she could give something to the community that she felt it was lacking.

"There's a lot of good theater here. But with the exception of Performance Carmel, there isn't a lot of what's cutting edge in the world of theater," she said.

So Contemporary Carmel was born. The festival will feature four main shows and three staged readings, all presented by artists that may not be well-known in this area, but are talented nonetheless, McKee said.

Shoehorn!

The four main attractions

May Day Sermon, a play by James Dickey, who wrote the screenplay for the film Deliverance, will be staged at 7 p.m. Saturday and at 8 p.m. Sunday.

The play is a one-woman show about a woman priest who is leaving the Church. It was staged in Los Angeles and then at the Edinburgh Fringe Festival in Scotland. The play will continue to run in Los Angeles after Contemporary Carmel.

Cultural Odyssey is a duo that performs modern, jazz, softshoe and tap dance styles, and also plays saxophone. Their show, Shoehorn!, will be staged at 7 p.m. Friday and at 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

Monsieur Sheherazad is "the most traditional piece," in the lineup, McKee explained. It's set during the Nazi occupation of France, and tells the story of a Frenchman on a train that is taken over en route by Nazis, who derail it. He escapes into a tunnel, but is confronted by French gendarmes, who demand to know his purpose for being there.

The Frenchman, played by Ron Campbell, tells them he's not being subversive, he's just an actor, and spends the rest of the play acting out characters he's portrayed in his career in order to convince them to let him go. It will be performed at 9 p.m. Friday (followed by a public, opening night reception) and at 6 p.m. Sunday.

The fourth main attraction of the festival is professional storyteller Diane Ferlatte. Her performance will be entitled Sapelo, or Time is Winding Up, and is a one-woman show about women in the South Pacific.

Ferlatte is the festival's opening act (at 5:30 p.m. Friday), and will give another performance at 4 p.m. Sunday.

Staged readings, workshops

Three free staged readings will be given in addition to the main shows. Walking on Bones, a new play by Carole Wolf, author of Monsieur Sheherazad; It's the Day After Valentines Day, a romantic comedy written (in poetry) and staged by Eric Trulles; and California Gold, a new play by local playwright Lee Brady, whose Southern Lights is currently being staged at California's First Theatre.

Brady is a Monterey Peninsula resident who knew McKee and was asked to take part in the festival. She gladly accepted. "It's such an eclectic lineup," she said. "I want to be there for the whole thing."

The playwright was also happy to have a forum in which to read her new play, which follows the life of a California "Oakie" from the early 1900s to the present. "It has 13 characters," Brady explained. "It's hard to give a reading of a play with that many characters in your living room."

Actor Ron Campbell will give a workshop on the art of body mugging Sunday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and Eric Trulles will give workshops each day of the festival from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. on solo performance technique.

Tickets for Contemporary Carmel's four major productions are $12 each; a pass for all four is $38. Staged readings are free.

Further information, staged reading times and tickets may be obtained by calling 393-2069.

MPC Dance Concert contains pieces by female choreographers exclusively

MONTEREY PENINSULA College's dance department will perform dances by Peninsula women choreographers when the department presents its annual Dance Concert at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday in the MPC Main Stage Theatre, 980 Fremont in Monterey.

This is the first time the MPC Dance Concert has featured selections by female choreographers only.

Jazz Tides

By JOHN DETRO

'A Tasty Affair,' Doc Rickett's springs back in jazzy way, Bill Bates returns to Peninsula!

PROGRAM DIRECTOR Peter Williams of KAZU Public Radio came to the Pacific Grove station from the late and surely lamented KJAZ. It's no mistake that he honors America's classical music — from barrelhouse to cutting edge — with generous time slots and attractive deejays.

Jazz buffs can say thanks by attending the outlet's ninth annual Tasty Affair fundraiser on Saturday evening at The Doubletree in downtown Monterey.

And you'll enjoy sampling more than 100 different wines, foodstuffs by leading area chefs, non-alcoholic beverages too.

Swing tunes will be rendered by Class Act — Marsha K (vocals), good buddy Norm Ross on bass, James Forkner (piano), Dr. Lewis Keiser (cornet), Eric Tonn at the drums, saxist Frank Leal. Frank worked with Stan Getz, Xavier Cougat, Dorsey bands,

By BEVERLY BORGMAN

Fashion is a state of mind — a manic state

HER NAME was Linda. She was young, blonde and fresh from the state of Florida where she'd worked as a newspaper reporter. She sat across from the managing editor, hopeful of snagging the coveted job of fashion editor.

"What do you know about fashion?" asked my monosyllabic boss, and Linda replied, "I know that my mother always told me to hold in my stomach." "Fine," said the M.E. "you're hired."

You might think this an apocryphal tale, but it's true. A newspaper with nearly 100,000 in circulation thus placed in Linda's small but capable hands the responsibility of informing its women readers as to what was "in" and what was "out" in the world of haute (and not-so-haute) couture.

The cash that fuels the engine of style

The fact that she did a credible job is not so much a tribute to her skills, but more a statement about fashion which is, let's face it, a state of mind that has more to do with money than anything else. Take a look at the recent issue of Vogue magazine, thick as an old Sears catalog, and you get an idea of the cash that fuels the engine of style.

Step back with me a few years, if you will, to the "Dress for Success" era. Women were silly little geese, we were told, to buy frivolous dresses for the office. We were all then directed toward menswear wool gabardine suits, blouses with a bow at the neck (so that we could still be sorted out from the males) and low-heeled shoes.

However, the minute our closets began to resemble the racks at Brooks Brothers, we got a new message: Be feminine. Women need to look like women. And some women needed to look like Madonna. Pretty soon, the woman who had worried that her slip might be showing was wearing her blouse opened to the navel and flaunting a push-up black bra.

Let me be clear at this point; I was not one of these women. Ever since I was 13 years old and had to abandon my three-inch heels downtown and buy a pair of slippers to get home in, I have been downright sensible. I did not join the "linen look" crowd in the '80s when the contest was to see who could wear the most wrinkles.

Gold lamé and red spandex

I did not buy a gold lamé blouse, though perhaps it is only fair to tell you of one notable occasion when I borrowed my son's red spandex pants and opalescent white jacket, and went with some friends to hear his band play at a local club. There I was asked to dance by a swarthy stranger. When my son caught sight of me, he leaned into the microphone and said for all to hear, "Don't stretch my pants, Mom."

I never dipped into his wardrobe again.

Oh well, as long as I'm making fashion confessions, I should tell you that I succumbed to hip-hugging bell-bottom trousers in the '70s, but I never bared my navel. My favorite pair of bells were blue-and-white check... but really quite subtle.

True, I was in the forefront of "hostess gown" wearers of the same era. For those too young to remember, this style began with dinner-party hostesses given permission by the arbiters of fashion to wear sweeping floor-length dresses or skirts. The effect was to put them one-up on their guests who wore the usual street-length outfits.

When the women in my suburban neighborhood realized they were being outclassed at every party by the gal who made the lasagna, they all began to wear long dresses. Soon, suburbia took on the look of the royal court.

We took ourselves quite seriously until we got a good long look at our husbands who were squeezed into three-piece polyester "Saturday Night Fever"-type suits. When we stopped laughing, we went back to dressing like normal people.

To tell the truth, I'm a little fuzzy on my chronology. Did the floor-length dress come before or after the mini? I bought two of those little numbers at my local Petri's store, looked at myself in the mirror, and immediately cut them both down to fit my pre-adolescent daughters. (It was when they were mid-adolescents that I got truly nervous. The dresses they wore to their first dance as 9th and 10th graders were just long enough to cover the essentials.)

Not a slave to fashion ... anymore

Where was I? Oh yes, I'm not a slave to fashion. At least, not anymore, but a recent article in that Other Paper caught my eye. It gave advice on how to buy a pair of jeans that fit — for people who are pear-shaped, apple-shaped, hourglass-shaped or saddle-bagged. It did not mention what to do if your figure resembles a saddle-bag full of pears, apples and hourglasses.

Most important, it did not deal with the subject of shrinkage, so here is your valuable fashion tip from the woman whose mother did not tell her to hold in her stomach: Buy your jeans at a thrift shop or resale store, and make sure they've already been through the wash. Otherwise, you'll just be buying a pair of jeans to give to the thrift shop or the resale store.

A fashion P.S.: I recently made fun of young men who wear their baseball caps backwards. I said they all looked like Comer Pyle. A gentleman who shall remain nameless agreed with my observation, but said I should pan equally the young women who carry bottles of water with them at all times, as if they might at any moment be stranded in the Mojave Desert.

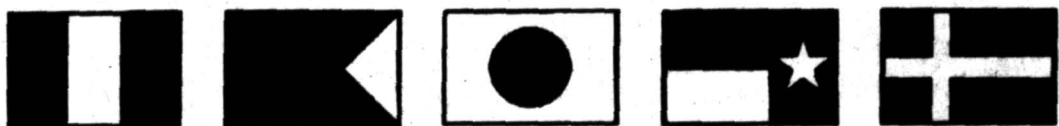

That's not all. The holiday perfume commercials are once again with us. Calvin Klein's radio ad is set against an exotic drum-beat; a dramatic voice tells us, "Between love and madness lies Obsession." The voice then goes on to tell us that with a $35 purchase, you can get a free baseball cap. I'd say that "between love and Obsession lies madness."

Beverly Borgman welcomes your questions and letters at P.O. Box 4402, Carmel, CA 93921-4402.

Eclectic musical comedy duo to give next Performance Carmel show

By IVY WESTON

PERFORMANCE CARMEL will present the Chameleons, a physical comedy duo, at 8 p.m. Saturday at Carpenter Hall in Sunset Center.

The Chameleons combine mime, circus, music, theatre, sound effects and the spoken word into an eclectic show. The duo's members are Keith Berger and Sharon Diskin, who have performed as a team since 1985, touring America and Europe.

The Chameleons are widely known in the Los Angeles area for their performances for children, which they take to the schools. They recently returned from Alaska, where they presented programs for children during the day and gave family-oriented performances at night.

Both Berger and Diskin studied at the American Mime Theater in New York City, and learned most of their techniques from their teacher, Paul Curtis. "He studied in France under Marcel Marceau," Diskin said, "who's probably the most famous mime."

Berger added, "But we're very different from that."

The duo rehearse new shows at their studio in Los Angeles, but spend most of their time touring. They said that their Carmel show will be comprised of seven or eight separate pieces.

"The show's pretty eclectic," Diskin said. "We range from high comedy to serious dramatic pieces."

"Stalker," one of the pieces, is scary; "Life Cycle" is about a two people who walk through life together. "It usually brings tears to people's eyes," Diskin said.

"We have another piece that's very illusory," Berger said. "It looks as if we're flying, with these umbrellas. It's pretty mind-blowing."

Diskin explained, "It's a romantic piece. Two people fly through the air toward each other and fall in love."

What they do is not easy, but the duo likes it that way. "It's a challenge," Diskin said. "It's fun."

The Chameleons

Tickets for The Chameleons are priced at $12.50 and $15, and are available at Sunset Center or by calling 624-3996.

Wally on the scene

The 1940s are celebrated as well by Wally's Swing World. Singer Wally Trinidad fronts the extremely popular aggregation which will work out tonight at Ferrante's atop the Monterey Marriott.

Dinner's served from 5 to 9 p.m. and dancing happens between 8 and 11. Meal reservations: 647-4020. It's a $5 cover for the entertainment by itself.

As long as we're touching on entertainment budgets, First Night Monterey — the non-alcoholic New Year celebration — announces locations for the purchase of admission buttons at just $5 per through Dec. 20.

Here: Comerica Bank branches, Nob Hill Foods, Monterey Coffeehouse Bookshop, Bay Books, Cymbaline Records, Carmel Music Co.

Again, the jazz acts signed up so far include Dick Robins and Friends, Dixieland Band with Len Williams, Monterey Sax Quartet, Kathleen Perry Quintet, Kenny Stahl Band. And the Yazoo Blues Revue — worth twice as many bucks all by itself.

Additionally, superb jazz writer Bill Minor recommends the Russian jazz pianist Gennady Loktionov's work at Mission Ranch. From 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday; 6 to 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Bill uses the phrase "rich dynamics" to characterize Gennady's music.

The new Doc's

Under new management, the refurbished Doc Rickett's Lab near Cannery Row reports that the band Wild Mango will appear there on Tuesday. This aggregation just tore up the place at the last Monterey Jazz Festival.

Upcoming: Kenny Rankin (Nov. 15), soulful saxist Clarence Clemens (Nov. 15). Hip hop jazz comes forth on Nov. 22 via Lost Tribe and Medeski, Martin and Wood.

And then it's blues you can use to party down. Joe Louis Walker on Dec. 15.

Viva in downtown Monterey has River Poets on Saturday night. And Tillie Gort's of Pacific Grove offers Philip Morgan — musician, songwriter and singer.

Out-of-town action

About that hip hop jazz bag. Kuumbwa Center of Santa Cruz has a winner coming up Friday night.

Charlie Hunter plays seven-string guitar and has signed with Blue Note Records. He'll front his trio at two shows — 8 and 10. Just $5 per at the door only.

On Monday night, the venue will spotlight brilliant Latin pianist Eddie Palmieri at 7:30 and 9:30. Either $16 advance (Cymbaline in downtown Monterey) or $18 at the door.

Kuumbwa overseer Tim Jackson is organizing a retrospective photography show on artists who've worked there over the many years. More about this when it's ready to open.

The San Francisco Jazz Festival still has some miles to go before it sleeps: Jerry Granelli and friends at Great American Music Hall (Wednesday), Charlie Haden's Quartet West at Herbst Auditorium (Nov. 10), block party with Charlie Hunter Trio and other units on 11th Street between Folsom and Harrison (Nov. 11), Ornette Coleman at Masonic Auditorium (Nov. 12).

And the capper — Branford Marsalis Quartet plus Sonny Simmons Trio at the Masonic on Nov. 13. Info: (415) 788-7353.

If you care to plan far ahead, a Mardi Gras 1994 party is planned from 1 until 10 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 10, at the Italian Gardens in San Jose (1500 Almaden).

Good trad jazz announced — Natural Gas Jazz Band and 10th Avenue Jazz Band with Alan O'Dea on tuba. Alan played hundreds of gigs hereabouts with Papa Jake Stock and those Abalone Stompers.

And a good cause. Bring a canned food item for the Salvation Army's holiday use.

The Joe and Mary Ingram Band — he's president of Monterey Bay Hot Jazz Society — is playing the All Oregon Dixieland Party with a dozen other crews. On Nov. 4-5-6 at various spots in Salem. Call (503) 888-4386.

Gospel composer Arvis Strickling-Jones wrote originals and new arrangements for a current San Francisco production of James Baldwin's 1955 play The Amen Corner.

Writer friends whose judgement I trust say it's an uplifting, well-done show. At the Lorraine Hansberry Theater, 620 Sutter, through Nov. 20. Call (415) 474-8800 for times and ticketing.

Yoshi's in North Oakland has scored piano legend Randy Weston and his African Rhythms Trio. On Nov. 30 and Dec. 1-2-3. Call (510) 652-9200.

Coming home

Ace Jazz Buff Bill Bates — yes, the beloved cartoonist who taught Carmel how to laugh at itself — writes from Texas. "We'll be moving back as soon as this (Austin) house sells."

Get-together

Former jazz disc jockey Martin Schmidt heads up the State Theater Preservation Group. Quoth Martin:

"Our annual meeting, normally held in August, was postponed this year due to preparations for the organ premiere. And so the meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 14, at the First National Bank Community Room in Monterey (on Abrego between Church and Webster)."

'Surfers in Budapest' deeper than name suggests

Between the surf lingo and comedy, life lessons are taught and learned.

By MATTHEW FRIDAY
Pine Cone Theater Critic

IN THE comedy Surfers in Budapest, now playing at The World Stage in New Monterey, the contradictions of content and form, youth and old age are brought lightly to bear under the deft hand of director Conrad Selvig.

Combining an Eastern European family with its American counterparts, one generation removed, playwright Susan Roether contrasts the attitudes of a some-far and beyond the stage stealer in the show as the irrepressible Panni, delivers a striking Mame-of-Budapest character.

Steeped in the beauty and culture of Budapest, Panni, full of readiness and vitality, will meet her "modern" American grandchildren, Ann and Billy, and teach them how to live — richly, meaningfully and, if necessary, with abandon. Panni does this without the advantages offered in chrome, hot and cold running water or air conditioning. Kocher does it with only 10 days preparation for the part in which she shines.

In the role of Panni's American granddaughter Ann, Suzie Commins offers a world-weary big sister type who is drawing from the now-shallow reservoir of wherever that happens to be.

Other notable characters

Playing Ann's younger brother Billy, Peter Nelson acts the role of a wet-behind-the-ears surfer wannabe. His lines, not yet natural on opening night, portray a character who practices the casual disregard of language associated with the truly atavistic: "Oh, yeah, man, well, like, for sure..." Billy, who lives vicariously through his surfing hero, Buck, must somehow discover himself, prove his salt and develop some personal resolve.

There's an incipient romance simmering just below the surface between Ann and the character Buck, played by American Dream star Chris Anderson. No one seems much aware of it, however, and the snappiness, false moves and innuendoes don't turn into anything until the second act (which offers other, more intriguing possibilities in plot development than the mis-steps of these two).

Besides a cocky bravura, Anderson's Buck offers the grace, rhythm, poetry and attractive daring of the surfer times messy, life-affirming Old World perspective with those of a modern, too-hygienic American practicality. She delivers the differences in a memorable character or two, comic riffs, juicy one-liners and a cultivated wit that held the attention of a nearly sell-out crowd on opening night last weekend.

Hungarian granny steals show

The show focuses on the foibles and philosophy of a Hungarian granny played by Nancy Kocher, who local audiences might remember from recent productions of Social Security and Nine. Kocher, her creativity to rediscover and write about Europe, its places, people, buildings — anything! "A person on whom nothing [is] lost," as she would have her epitaph read, the angst-ridden Ann somehow overlooks the dynamic and unpredictable whirlwind that is her grandmother.

Ann believes it is her job to get Panni to California to live; to the audience it is comically clear that wherever Panni is, her harrowing lifestyle will dictate the conditions of her living. California is superfluous to Panni — she brings everything she has to the art of being alive,

Johnny Depp stars as filmmaker Edward D. Wood, Jr., the eccentric creator of such B-movies as 'Plan 9 From Outer Space.'

Portrait of Hollywood's worst filmmaker is surprisingly good

By CRAIG ARNOTT
Pine Cone Film Critic

THE STORY of Ed Wood, the worst filmmaker of his and perhaps our day, wouldn't seem to be successful fodder for a current major studio release. Yet Tim

ED WOOD

So production quality suffered. Plastic flying saucers were maneuvered by strings attached to fishing poles, carpeted grass slid beneath the actors' feet and Tor "The Animal" Johnson had a disturbing tendency of walking into sets' walls.

These gaffes, instead of being loudly milked in sitcom style, are treated in a droll, understated way. And rather than ridicule, the audience's reaction is one of strange affection. The cast and crew had such devotion to their "craft" that they ignored what they thought were minor errors and simply plowed ahead. This mood of sloppy exuberance, as expertly realized by Burton, is the soul of Ed Wood.

A true oddity

Wood himself is a true oddity. The first film he helmed, Glen or Glenda, mirrored his own fondness for wearing women's clothes (particularly angora sweaters). He developed a strong friendship with aging horror king Bela Lugosi (Martin Landau), who appeared in a number of Wood's films while nursing a serious morphine habit.

The cast and crew had such devotion to their 'craft' that they ignored what they thought were minor errors and simply plowed ahead. This mood of sloppy exuberance, as expertly realized by Burton, is the soul of 'Ed Wood.'

Wood's wife Dolores left him, partly because of his angora fetish and partly because her choice roles in his films were being given to women with more clout or financial backing; he tries to calm her anguish, using the ridiculous pet names "Snowball" and "Poodle."

Throughout, Wood maintains a carefree air, bound to the belief that he is making important motion pictures. A chance (and purely fictionalized) meeting with Orson Welles has the two commiserating on how difficult it is to acquire backing and retain control of a screenplay.

The unfettered look of Ed Wood is faithful to its subject. Filmed in black and white, it has the same amateurish feel, though it flows in a very limber way. Burton's camera angles are subdued and effective, and he is wise to break away from his light touch and treat Lugosi's addiction with naked pathos.

Such as it is, Landau's turn as Lugosi is disarming and masterful. First seen being mockingly outfitted for a coffin, he soon comes to be viewed as a broken antique, nesting in his cavernous house with needle marks scattered across his arm.

Depp is buoyant as Wood, giving him an impish grin, broad sideways glances and a rushed staccato delivery. Notable cast members include Bill Murray as aspiring transsexual John "Bunny" Breckinridge, an incredibly demure Patricia Arquette as Wood's new girlfriend and Jeffrey Jones as the phony psychic Criswell.

Though in reality Wood's life probably lacked the level of trashy ambition that Burton has imagined (the director died a bloated wreck in 1978 after writing a string of smut books), Ed Wood is a kind testament to blind dedication and love.

Rating: Poor ★ Fair ★★
Good ★★★ Excellent ★★★★★

Burton, famous for his skewered vision in films like Edward Scissorhands and the Batman duo, has proven a fit choice.

Ed Wood is very much an inspired lark, and the way Burton takes such deep delight in the sad antics of the maverick troupe of filmmakers behind such bombs as Plan 9 from Outer Space and Bride of the Monster is infectious.

Because of limited funds, Wood (Johnny Depp) was forced to shoot his 50s-era films on extremely tight schedules, often in as few as four grueling days.

Guarneri String Quartet delivers 'world class evening of music'

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN
Pine Cone Music Critic

THE GUARNERI String Quartet, who are pre-eminent practitioners of their art, opened the new season of the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula Tuesday evening in Carmel's Sunset Center Theater.

A well-nigh capacity audience was privileged to experience a world class evening of music delivered in a fashion to be proud of, by a group who have been concertizing together for 30 years. That this unusual stability of personnel is highly meaningful was amply demonstrated in the course of the evening.

Violinists Arnold Steinhardt and John Dalley, violist Michael Tree and cellist David Soyer have created a remarkably polished, assured and balanced ensemble whose weight and tone are staunchly and faithfully oriented toward the meaning and content of the compositions under their musical scrutiny.

The program began with the Haydn Quartet in G Major Op. 77, No. 1. A very late work and one of his last quartets, it is a sterling example of the composer's mature thought.

With violinist John Dalley taking the leading role, the Allegro was full of spirit, yet it had romantic depth and feeling. Dalley's tone was full and vibrant, dominating the ensemble, but still well placed in relation to the other strings. The attacks and releases were precise and finely honed even as the players retained a feeling of spontaneity and freshness.

In the Adagio the opening statement revealed the quartet moving together with great sensitivity and unity of expression. The dynamics were beautifully conceived, sounding heartfelt, passionate and intensely

Ensemble Monterey opens season with innovative music, original compositions

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

ENSEMBLE MONTEREY presented a hallmark concert Sunday afternoon in the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall.

A highly qualified professional organization which made its debut in February 1992, it spotlights the talents of some of the finest classical musicians performing in our area. The thoroughly characteristic event continued the original and unusual approach of its founder and conductor Dr. John Anderson, whose purpose in establishing Ensemble Monterey was to explore and exploit a body of musical literature seldom programmed locally.

With the concert entitled Something Old, Something New, Anderson continued his concentration on a mix of compositions which are not quite orchestral, yet can be more than "chamber music," employing the resources of strings, winds, brasses, percussion and voice.

Innovative, exciting, intriguing music

The programs for this season's series of four concerts include a wealth of innovative, exciting and intriguing music. The repertoire listed ranges from the Baroque of Bach and Vivaldi to the modern of Debussy, Stravinsky, Kurt Weill and our own Steven Tosh whose latest composition is the "Something New" and was given its world premiere.

Tosh has enjoyed a long and varied musical career as a conductor, pianist, teacher and composer. His more than 200 works include music from most major areas. Much of his music is known here where many of his works have been commissioned.

The world premiere of the String Quartet Number 2 he wrote for the Monterey Bay String Quartet and dedicated to its first violinist David Dally, was a highly enjoyable and appealing program opener. The accomplished young musicians who played so ably were violinists David Dally and Patty Boggs, violist Sarah Correll and cellist Margie Dally.

THE VANDERBILT HOUSE

Los Laureles Lodge restaurant gives feeling of dining at friend's home

LOS LAURELES Lodge, a historic country inn just off Carmel Valley Road, boasts expansive green lawns, pristine guest cottages, and the lodge's excellent restaurant, The Vanderbilt House.

The Vanderbilt House is cozy and warm, and dining there is like being invited to dinner at a friend's home. One admires the pretty floral curtains and tablecloths, the china on display and the old framed family portraits hanging on the wall.

The building that houses the restaurant, wood-paneled cocktail lounge and beautiful lobby complete with fireplace was, in fact, once someone's house.

In the 1930s, it belonged to Muriel "Vanderbilt" Phelps, who was a wealthy woman who inhabited the house and built the swimming pool that still exists in front of the restaurant.

Phelps was a gracious hostess and entertained frequently. She even added salt to the swimming pool's water so that her guests could partake of an "ocean" swim while in Carmel Valley.

The history of The Vanderbilt House and Los Laureles Lodge actually dates back to the early 1830s. In the late 1800s and early 1900s, guests at Monterey's Del Monte Hotel would be transported by carriage to the sunny spot when the weather along the coast was foggy.

Upon Muriel Phelps' sale of the Rancho approximately 10 years after she had purchased it, it became a resort and has remained that way.

Very inventive cuisine

This is no run-of-the-mill resort restaurant, however. The Vanderbilt House's menu is very inventive indeed. We started with wonderful Caesar salads, then moved on to the tasty "Awesome Valley Blossom" appetizer: a half onion, scored, batter dipped, fried and served with a chile sauce.

One of our entree selections was the grilled Monterey Bay salmon with a dill chardonnay sauce, served with wild rice pilaf and vegetables. It was excellent.

The other, a pizza topped with pesto, mozzarella, grilled shrimp and goat cheese, had a flavor so wonderful it is indescribable.

Other entrees on the menu include Old Del Monte Hotel filet mignon, sauteed with peppercorns and deglazed with cognac and cream; angel hair pasta with sundried tomatoes; and herb roasted duck with cranberry glaze.

The wine list has a distinct local flavor, including Carmel Valley wineries Bernardus, Durney and Georis. Many other Monterey County wineries are also on the list.

For dessert, we sampled a bread pudding, which was rich and moist, as it was made with croissants rather than bread. It was topped with whipped cream and raisin-whiskey sauce.

Crème brûlée with sundried cranberries, a hot fudge sundae, and chocolates filled with Durney Vineyards' Cabernet Sauvignon are among the other desserts offered.

Jacqueline Walewski, executive chef at The Vanderbilt House since March, was taught to cook by her father, by studying family recipes, and at the Tanté Marie cooking schools in San Francisco and London.

Walewski has owned her own catering company in San Jose, served as kitchen and catering manager for Nordstrom, and for 10 years was food service manager for Apple Computer in Santa Clara.

She decided to settle on the Monterey Peninsula for several reasons. "I don't want to travel anymore," she said. "I like being close to the ocean, and it's so beautiful here. And I like the access to Carmel Valley and Salinas Valley fresh produce."

One of the things that makes Walewski a great chef is that she constantly asks for feedback from her patrons. "I like going out into the dining room and mingling, finding out what they liked," she said.

The Vanderbilt House is open for breakfast from 7 to 10:30 a.m., lunch from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., and for dinner from 5:30 to 10 p.m., seven days a week. Further information can be obtained by calling 659-2233.

Quartet played with precision, energy

weighted.

In the spirited agile Minuet, the first violin executed great feats of daring (all written in the music). The rhythmically accented trio was excitingly traversed. The light, airy Presto with its virtuoso first violin part, was tossed off in scintillating style. The ensemble was absolutely exemplary and the assurance and accuracy of the playing made this a performance whose memory should be treasurable.

Shifting gears

Turning almost violently to the Bartok Quartet No. 4 (1928), violinist Arnold Steinhardt took over the first violin part. Here, though the musical language no longer is strange to present day audiences, the contrast to the preceding work was almost crashingly stark. The bleak dissonances and heavy accents created an atmosphere of strong conflict, requiring an adjustment of aural communication with the listener.

Interestingly, the same elements of quartet playing are just as necessary in this angular, jagged music as in the charming gracefulness of the Haydn. There was the same awareness of dynamics, phrasing, ensemble, rhythmic concentration and completely disciplined attention to the score. Playing like titans, the quartet encompassed the driving rhythmic figurations, ferocious discords and tremendous technical demands in masterful style throughout the work.

Shifting gears again, the Guarneri players became the ideal interpreters of the Debussy Quartet in G Minor. Written in 1893, this is an early example of impressionistic composition and in this rendition it was a living, breathing, fully convincing exposition of the style.

To begin, a high tension level was projected. The alert responsiveness of the musicians to each other brought intensity, vividness and an almost orchestral tone quality to the first movement.

The airy pizzicato playing and the contrasting rich tone when bows were employed in the second movement, made it a jewel-like experience. The hushed yet spacious tone of the Andantino's tender melody was exquisitely shaped and molded.

In response to the enthusiastic and appreciative applause, the Scherzo from the Mendelssohn Quartet in E Flat Major was given an enchanting performance.

The next concert of the series will be played by the Amici Trio (flute, cello and piano) on Thursday, Nov. 17.

Ensemble Monterey season opener: 'Music was over too soon'

Their performance of the surprisingly appealing, fresh and listenable work showed them to be musically aware and technically able. But, even more important, they played with understanding and dedication, making sure that the audience could more easily enjoy and appreciate their vehicle.

Full-blooded, vibrant

After the intermission, Tosh appeared in the guise of a virtuoso pianist playing in Mozart's happiest and most inspired mythos in its own vocabulary. The sea-less Hungarians will have to make whatever sense they can of him, but humor, willingness and a spiritual kinship will help quite a bit.

Most of the play happens between these four principals; however, Tim Harris as Lazlo, Hungarian uncle to Ann and Billy, turns in a remarkable performance. He is genuine, modest, clownish, and altogether believable.

His son Latze, played by Mike Baker, is a third year economics student at the University. He is a sort of stereotypic (if East European) nerd: awkward, self-conscious and a little high strung, but altogether eager to pick up on the interests and habits offered by his American cousins — or Buck.

Selvig has done a terrific job in presenting this piece, displaying his knack for the poignant and comical. With the insights and aid of Rob Carver, a very successful tripartite stage hold the play's energy (representing, perhaps, Budapest's lingering elegance and street life as much as the daily lives of its middle class).

The show sparkles, picks up noticeably whenever Panni is present; however, Buck, too, provides firmer edges with his appearances. When Panni and Buck are combined on stage it is touching, risqué and titillating.

Laughter was extended and spontaneous throughout the show on opening night and, once again, The World Stage should be commended for offering original, unknown works on the Peninsula.

Well worth the few dollars it takes to get there, ...Budapest plays Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 7 p.m. through Nov. 20 at The World Stage, 320 Hoffman (upstairs) in New Monterey. Tickets are available at the door, or by calling 646-9478 for reservations.

works, the Quintet in E Flat Major for Piano and Winds, K. 452. Included in a full-blooded, vibrant performance were members of the Laurel Wind Quintet (Donna Forster, oboe; Jane Knight, clarinet; Jane Orzel, bassoon and John Orzel, horn).

The program continued with two works by the contemporary Spanish-born composer Carlos Surinach.

Surinach's ballet music Ritmo Jondo concluded the afternoon's music-making. Clarinetist Jane Knight was joined by timpanist Don Morehead and xylophone player Paul Everts, plus three flamenco hand clappers known earlier as violinist (David Dally), flutist (Marci Krause) and oboist (Donna Forster).

With flavorful percussive rhythmic flair and haunting instrumental tone, the music was over all too soon. For me, they could have played it again as an encore.

The next concert, on Feb. 1, contains seldom programmed string works by Mozart, Mendelssohn and Debussy.

New paintings by Gene Speck to be hung at La Rue Gallery

THE LA Rue Gallery will host a reception for landscape artist Gene Speck and show six of his new paintings from 4 to 8 p.m. Saturday at the gallery, Dolores between 5th and 6th in Carmel.

Speck held a variety of careers before embracing fine arts at the age of 35. He started to dabble in oils on canvas, practicing different themes and techniques. He sold several paintings at street art shows and, encouraged, turned his attention to refining his talent.

Speck visited Nevada and California, where he took photographs and made sketches of mountains, deserts and meadows. His favorite points of professional interest today are the Sierra Nevada, the Cascades, and the deserts and winding mountain ranges that criss-cross the western states.

Speck's illusion of perspective takes one into the high country or across a vast, sand-blown desert, or into a Native American village.

The artist's work has been exhibited in galleries throughout the western U.S. The La Rue Gallery is his exclusive representative in California. Further information may be obtained by calling 625-5636.

The visions of the five artists range from Impressionism to Realism. Each artist will be present at the reception to unveil his or her original watercolors, acrylics, oils, monotypes and mixed media works.

Reid Gallery, to date, has carried limited edition lithographs and serigraphs from artists such as Michael

Reid Gallery director Brian Westbrook and owner Joanna Gibson with Timothy Callahan (right) of the 'California Five.'

Parke and Eyvind Earle, which it will continue to do; however, effective from the "California Five" exhibition forward, the gallery will also carry original works by California artists.

The collection will remain on view through Dec. 31. Further information may be obtained by calling 624-4243.

Reception for Sunset Center pottery exhibit set

A RECEPTION for Glimpse Some Possibilities of Clay, an exhibit of works by Sunset Center pottery/ceramics students, will take place from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday in the center's Marjorie Evans Gallery. The public is welcome.

The exhibit will be on view from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Nov. 30 in the

Big Horn Galleries opens exhibit of Chinese art

CHINA: CONTEMPORARY Realism From The Land Of The Dragon opens Saturday and hangs through Nov. 20 at Big Horn Galleries in Carmel.

The exhibit includes watercolors, lacquer paintings and other Chinese art forms.

Information: 625-2288.

"CALIFORNIA PASTURES" is the title of this original painting by Eyvind Earle, now on view at Gallery 21 on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel.

Gallery 21 stands as 'hometown headquarters' of Eyvind Earle

The works of Eyvind Earle are represented in more than 100 galleries worldwide. But there is only one gallery where you can see his original paintings, serigraphs and sculpture on an ongoing basis.

Gallery 21 in downtown Carmel is the "hometown headquarters" of Eyvind Earle, for the artist makes his home in Carmel-by-the-Sea. His works are perpetually on view here, and the collection shows the breadth of this artist's vision.

In his more than 50-year career, Earle has worked in motion picture art direction, portraiture, murals, magazine covers, animation, greeting cards, book illustration and poetry. His illustrations for Christmas cards have sold upwards of 200 million. For the Walt Disney Studio, he was production designer for the landmark film, "Sleeping Beauty," lending his signature style to the piece.

Earle is the father of a school of painting referred to as "Designed Realism" or "Magic Realism."

Experience the magic at Gallery 21, located on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh. It is open daily from 10 a.m. Call 626-2700.

An animated interview

"Hi, LITTLE pony."

"Oh...hello."

"What's the matter?"

"I...I don't feel so well. Why do you want to know?"

"C'mon...Shoot! I'm a reporter."

Little pony hung his head very low. Upon observation, you could see the ribs sticking out of his sides, and his legs hurt so much that he kept shifting from one to the other to alleviate the pain.

"Well...I...I was a riding pony in a petting zoo for 10 years, and one day my master sold me. They crammed me into a double-decker cattle truck with a lot of other ponies and horses, on a four-day journey, with temperatures soaring in the hundreds."

"I don't understand. Where were you going?"

"I overheard the driver say that we were going to a Texas slaughterhouse, so we wouldn't need any food or water. Because we couldn't hold our heads up, some of us, especially the horses, had broken necks when they got there. I was almost trampled to death and too weak to stand, so they helped me out of the truck, using huge meat hooks...I...I guess you know the rest."

It was true; deep gashes from a large instrument that had been placed around his haunches were very much in evidence.

"What made your master do such a deed?"

"I don't know...I heard him tell the driver that he'd recoup his loss by auctioning me off to a dog food company, or he'd sell me for dinner fare for the tables in Japan and Europe...I miss him so much. But I'm one of the lucky ones, I guess."

"How so?"

"These people here at Redwings saved me and a lot of my friends. I sure hope I make it. I get food and water now, and I don't have to work anymore. There's a great doctor here, too. He's helping me to straighten out my hooves. I miss the kids who used to ride on my back, but the people here give me a lot of love."

"Listen, little pony...."

"Oh my gosh...I'm sorry...I just gotta lie down right now."

I could see that he couldn't stand up much longer, so I left, hoping to God he'd make it...

Altruists abounded

It was quite beautiful last Saturday at Holman Ranch. Altruists abounded. People who know that no human being should ever hurt an animal — people who would rather put them to sleep than send them off to a hellish future — came together. You could feel it in the air — the care, the love, the desire to just help old horses, ponies and donkeys to a peaceful retirement. And that's all it took.

So, together, many artists, the Monterey Community Band, wonderful hostess Dorothy McEwen (owner of the Holman Ranch) and volunteers held "The Great Escape — Art Show & Sale" to benefit the animals. There were many auction items, wines and hors d'oeuvres, special guest stars and fine artwork by well-known artists.

Redwings Board president Bonnie Stoehn spoke to the many supporters in front of a paddock, describing a horse named Topaz, age 3, who came to the Redwings Horse Sanctuary after being slated for the slaughterhouse. Stoehn told us that television reporter Christine Lund went underground and witnessed the hideous condition of the animal when she arrived for the "killer buyers" sale. Topaz is immeasurably better now.

The Redwings Horse Sanctuary philosophy, according to Stoehn, is that a horse, pony or donkey should be purchased after serious thought. Potential owners should realize that an animal is not an expendable commodity — it needs a home for the rest of its life, and should not be sold or cast aside because it's too old or because it has become a financial burden.

Afterward, supporters were allowed to pet the horses, donkeys and ponies, and feed them hay in special paddocks.

Redwings Horse Sanctuary board president Bonnie Stoehn feeds wild donkeys 'Pal and Finn' at the Great Escape gala held last Saturday at Holman Ranch in Carmel Valley. The donkeys were saved from the slaughterhouse and are now wards of the sanctuary.

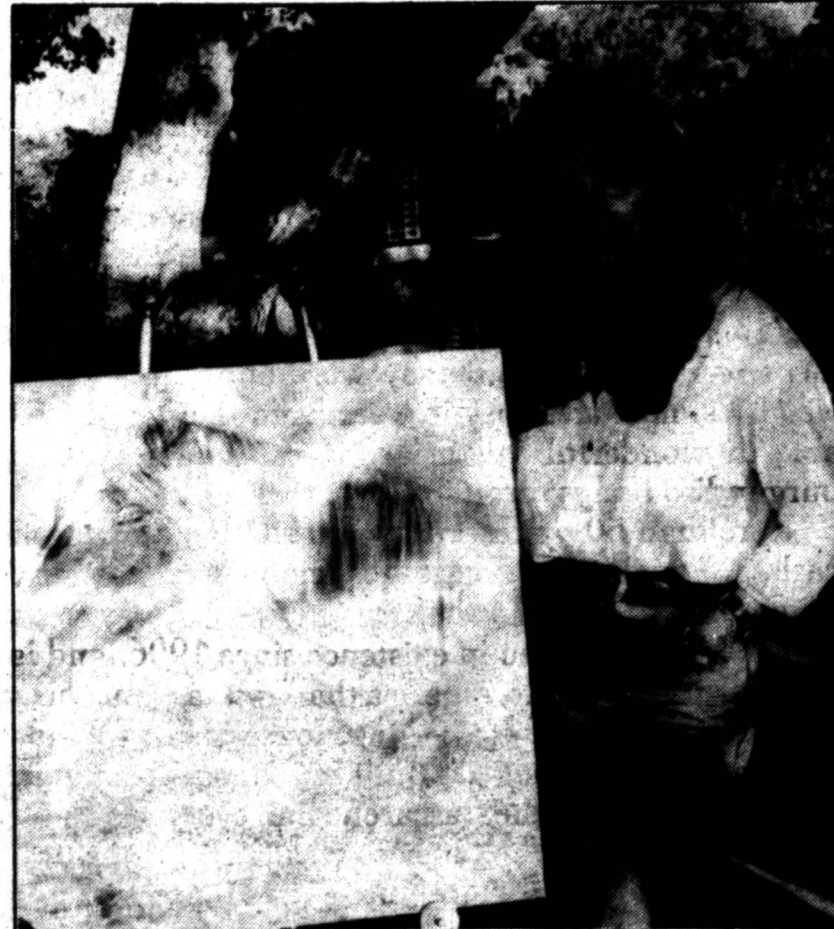

PHOTOS/CHUCK SCARDINA

'Buck,' a draft horse, was sold to 'killer buyers' because he was too timid to pull a wagon. His recovery — after suffering damaged legs and malnourishment — is credited to the Redwings Horse Sanctuary.

Redwings Horse Sanctuary staffers and volunteers Valerie Stack, Jenn Neely and Brett Bausk ask supporters to donate just $10 to help care for abused animals.

Carmel artist Lisa Bryan joined many other peninsula artists who exhibited works of art at last Saturday's Redwings Horse Sanctuary benefit held at Holman Ranch in Carmel Valley.

If you would like to donate $10 dollars per year to feed and adopt a rescued animal (and bi-annual reports and a photograph of its progress) send your donation to: Redwings Horse Sanctuary, P.O. Box 222705, Carmel, CA 93922; or call 624-8464. Remember, your donation is 100 percent tax-deductible and would make a great Christmas present...and it's good for your soul!

Junior League's auction party

Newly refurbished Rancho Cañada rang with the rock 'n' roll sounds of the Hydromatics Saturday evening as the Junior League (JL) of Monterey County, Inc., let it all hang out! What great fun!

Forty years old and still going strong, the JL holds the largest and most impressive annual N2N (Next to New) sale in Monterey County, if not the entire state. They virtually take the all Monterey Fairgrounds buildings for one day, fill them with furniture, clothing, kitchen goods, toys and every other item imaginable, open them to the public and use the monies engendered for many different charities. This year's project is the Natividad Medical Center "Touches" and the Monterey County Youth Museum.

They also grant scholarships to women to help them continue their higher education goals, and help develop and nurture the leadership skills of their active members.

Co-chair Lynda Schraegle told us that with the funds generated from this evening, combined with next Saturday's N2N sale at the Fairgrounds, they expect to raise $80,000.

I asked Schraegle if all the JL women were as young as she. She answered, "Oh, no, some are in their late twenties." Ahem!

Tables were decorated with beautifully-colored cardboard juke boxes filled with huge red and yellow flowers. Yellow, black and red balloons (looking like huge jellybeans) were streaming out of the boxes, and tiny musical notes were scattered everywhere across the tables. Hanging from the rafters were extra large rock 'n' roll records.

On the tables were small red and black posters which carried world events during different years. Between 1955 and '56, Albert Einstein died, Disneyland opened in Anaheim and James Dean was killed; from 1978 to '79, Mother Theresa won the Nobel Peace Prize; and from 1982 to '83, Brezhnev died at age 75, Princess Diane had her first son and Princess Grace was killed in an auto crash. And throughout these years, the JL has held its N2N sales! Quite impressive.

Some of the silent auction items included word processors, Deltagraph games, huge gift baskets of foods, wines and cheeses, a $300 holiday decoration package and an incredible antique baby cradle.

Auctioneer and local attorney Bob Rosenthal moved the live auction items smoothly...they included, among others, a vacation in Telluride, Colorado, a sail for six on Monterey Bay with dinner at Central 159, and nights at marvelous inns and hotels.

Kudos to Jean Hurd, who has donated her home to be used for large dinner gatherings at every live auction we have attended.

SPOTLIGHT from page 42

A special award should be given to co-chairs Sue Storm and Lynda Schraegle and to their committee people — Kari Gustafson, Beth Ingram, Diana Trapani and Jeannine Pacioni — for making the event as lavish and the dinner as wonderful as it was. How do you top an event like this? We'll see next year.

Monterey Civic Club fashion show

The Elks Club is a pretty place. It overlooks Monterey Bay, where tiny white sailboats can be seen drifting on the waters. It was a fitting location last Sunday for the Monterey Civic Club's (MCC) Fall Festival of Fashions — a show of pretty women.

After a delicious lunch of chicken parmesan and champagne sherbet, there were door prizes awarded, and the Mario Pacini Trio played delightful '40s and '50s tunes. Ree Ree Smith sang "Arrivederci Roma" to much applause. And Kyle and Celeste Wagoner danced some red hot boogie-woogie and lindy-hops. Lindy-hops? Never mind...way before your time!

Then, fashion commentator John Myszak compared our area with the glorious autumn colors of the clothes being modeled in the show.

One tiny tot, Michelle Conte, her hair wreathed in flowers, turned into a whirling dervish, enchanting us all.

Coordinator and professional model Marti Myszak wisely chose all types to model the clothing, giving us a chance to see how styles would look on us. There were short, older, tiny, large and slender women modeling fashions, making them much more realistic.

Styles from Gerry's Fashions, Carmel Lifestyle, Westport Woman and Mervyn's Children's Department were shown, and they were amazingly lightweight, simple and easy to wear. And they are available in wonderful fall colors — deep blues, reds, burgundies and greens.

More than 50 prizes were awarded, including $50 cash, gift certificates, massages, manicures, hats and others.

The MCC has been in existence since 1906, and is one of the few clubs in America that owns and sustains a historic adobe building — the House of Four Winds in Monterey — which was built by Thomas Larkin in 1837. They put on the Cascarone Ball every year, and the club also donates money to various city charities. If you wish to learn more about the Monterey Civic Club, call Mary Engholm at 375-3338.

N2N Chairwomen Lynn Clements, Debra Schadeck, President April Green, Sue Storm and Lynda Schraegle at the Junior League of Monterey County's auction party held last Saturday at Rancho Cañada in Carmel Valley.

Selling tickets and handling reservations at the JL bash are youngest auction committee 'babes' Kari Gustafson and Beth Ingram.

Burney and Mary Threadgill, community advisers to the Junior League, enjoyed themselves at the auction party at held last Saturday evening at Rancho Cañada.

Monterey County Superior Court Judge John Anton and Steve Gunia converse at the Junior League auction party held last Saturday night in Carmel Valley.

Ruth Reed and Robin Green (standing), Jo Dee Krebs, Margot Bergquist, Fay Fehd and MCC treasurer June Dudley attended the MCC Fall Festival of Fashions held last Sunday at the Elks Club in Monterey.

Water behind many house ills

SEARCHING FOR an explanation for why construction defect cases are increasing, real estate experts say most of the problems can be attributed to water invading areas of the home where it shouldn't be.

Indeed, one group of Californians who aren't complaining about a water shortage are homeowners who have suffered water damage in their homes. Through the roof, in window cracks and from the outdoor sprinkling system, water intrusion causes serious damage to a house.

"Next to earthquake, water intrusion is by far the major cause of problems in California homes," said Alamo attorney Tyler Berding who specializes in homeowner association law.

Everything from shoddy construction and poor maintenance to inferior materials and the drought itself is blamed for the increased number of water damage cases. Less rain means more sunshine, which can do more damage to a roof than water, because of the effect the sun has on roofing materials.

"After baking in the sun for seven years, the systems just don't perform," said Los Angeles attorney Jeffrey Masters who represents developers in construction defect litigation.

Untested, inferior materials

Another explanation is untested and inferior construction materials, which were used during the development boom of the 1980s. Masters pointed to one

'If you could get rid of the water problem you would wipe out a lot of the trouble in homeowners associations.'

Robyn Boyer Stewart, lobbyist for homeowner associations case in which a developer, who was being sued by a homeowners association, sued a glue manufacturer because of water damage. The glue was allegedly faulty and the case was settled out of court.

In some cases, materials that are used to fend off water damage have simply worn out.

Berding points to tar and gravel roofs, which unlike a properly installed tile roof, will eventually wear out, he said.

Whatever the cause, wood rot, buckled floors, discolored ceilings and foundation damage from shifting ground are some of the ways water gets in the wrong places and causes damage.

Worse, according to Berding, water can damage metal tie downs that are designed to help homes resist earthquakes, and it can even get into a foundation slab and begin to rust out the re-bar, which is fundamental to a home's stability.

"It seeps, drips and spurts (into a home) that is unprotected or poorly constructed," said Robyn Boyer Stewart, who lobbies for homeowner associations in Sacramento. "If you could get rid of the water problem you would wipe out a lot of the trouble in homeowners associations."

Boyer blames many of the problems on poor construction during the go-go 1980s when homes were being built at a record pace and when at times standards slipped.

While construction defects may be one of the rea-

THE CARMEL COLLECTION

BEST PRICE IN BEST LOCATION

This, in our view, is the best buy in Carmel's coveted Golden Rectangle. The location is prime South of Ocean near town & beach. As I write this the average listing price in this part of town is $974,629. The median sales price of the 30 houses sold since Jan. 1st. is $620,000. Yet this ample cottage is for sale for an incredible $449,000.

Sure, it needs work, but Nellie and I can tell you what we would do to make it an excellent home, and the location will do the rest to make this your Carmel dream-come-true. Call us for a private showing, and we will both show you the property and share with you our ideas about it.

Building industry claims water charge overblown

sons for water problems, the building industry claims the charge is overblown.

"Lawyers who represent homeowners make the connection (between defects and water problems) into Armageddon," said attorney Masters.

Lack of maintenance?

He also said that some of the problems have more to do with lack of maintenance than construction defects.

For example, developers argue that water problems caused by a sprinkler spraying onto the building shouldn't be blamed on them.

Moreover, builders charge that homeowners associations are too quick to file a lawsuit when water damage is discovered without investigating the various causes of the problem.

This charge is dismissed by homeowners groups and their representatives.

"Water problems only get the legal ball rolling when the builder doesn't respond and doesn't fix what he is responsible for," said Berding.

DECLARATION OF NON SERVICE

I, the undersigned am and was on the dates herein mentioned, over the age of eighteen years and not a party to this action, attempted to serve the following:

SUMMONS, COMPLAINT & CASE MANAGEMENT NOTICE and that after due search, careful inquiry and diligent attempts at the only known address for Respondent: 745 Martin St., Monterey, Ca. I have been unable to make delivery of said process on the within named:

ELIZABETH PARKER

Process is being returned without service for the following reasons:

June 13, 1994 attempted service at the house and found it uninhabitable due to a house fire.

I contacted a neighbor who said the defendant had moved to Santa Barbara but that she did not have an address for her. The neighbor gave me a number where I might reach the defendant's daughter to get more information.

I contacted the defendants daughter by phone on June 28, 1994. She explained that her mother had just left from visiting. She refused to give me a phone number or address for the defendant but offered to take my name and number. I explained the purpose of needing to reach her mother and gave her my name and phone number but never heard from her.

On July 25, 1994 upon contacting the Monterey Post Office, I was informed the address on Martin Street was still listed for the defendant.

On July 27, 1994 I spoke to the defendants daughter again and was told she had passed on my number and that was all she could do.

I contacted information in the Santa Barbara area and there is no listing for the defendant.
